Comes To Central's B.N. Duke Auditorium

A Broadway play that is as "black as a multi-move handshake," and as soul-stirring as an O'Jays love song," comes to NCCU Wednesday,

September 14.
"Home," the story of a North Carolina man who grew up on a farm, pulled time in prison, and ran north to find freedom, but returned home, to find peace and contentment, will be performed by a national touring company in B.N. Duke Auditorium on campus.

The curtain rises at 7:30 p.m. Admission is $1 for students and $3 for everyone else. Tickets are on sale in Room 125 at the Student Union. The plays NCCU appearance is sponsored by the Student Union.

The play, which opened on Broadway in May 1980 and later garnered several awards after playing to rave reviews, tells a story that almost everyone black can identify with.

Sunday

September 12, 1982

It is the story of Cephus Miles, a bright, playful character who loves the simple life-the field work on his grandfather's farm, the fiery kick of homemade whiskey and the rip-roaring Saturday night fish fries.

But as a young man, he loses his girl, his grandfather loses the farm, and Miles, who shouldn't kill each other, marches off to prison for refusing to go to Viet Nam.

Upon his release from prison, he runs north to New York to find freedom, but instead finds the hard times of welfare handouts and street corner drug deals.

Finally, like the prodigal son he'd often read about in the New Testament, Miles takes the long bus ride home to North Carolina where he finds love, peace and contentment. This causes him to say that the God he's accused of being on vacation in Miami has returned, and Miles says simply "Welcome back."

The play is the work of Samm-Art Williams, 36, a native of Burgaw, N.C., a small farming town in eastern North Carolina that claimed some degree of noteriety several years ago as the site of the Wilmington 10 convictions. Burgaw is just like the country town where the play takes place.

Williams' mother, a drama and literature teacher, encouraged him to develop an interest in writing as early as his high school years. After graduating from Baltimore's Morgan State College in 1968, Samm-Art set out for New York to launch a career in both acting and playwriting.

He adopted his hyphenated name when he found an actor in New York, already on stage, who name is also Sammy Williams.

Though Samm-Art enjoyed reasonable success as an actor, his playwriting career was going no place fast.

"Mome" went through many rewrites before I reached the final draft. From the final draft. From December 22, 1976 until the summer of 1978, I was constantly with the play. Having readings. Trying to find a producer. Beating the pavement to drum up interest, he said.

"At times it seemed so difficult and hopeless and rejection of the script soiconstant, I began to wonder if I was the only person in the world who considered "Home" a great play. "Maybe it's too simple," I thought, 'Not complicated enough. Positive endings are old-fashioned.""

Williams also thought about how far from the roots of "Home" he had come. "It all began on Greyhound. Being afraid to fly, I usually travel home to Burgaw, by bus. This one particular Christmas, 1976 it was, rolling south from New York City, I began to daydream about old friends and times past. I anticipated with joy, being home with my family for the holidays, seeing my old buddies, and getting my hands on some good home-made wine. Little did I know, as my thoughts. wandered, that I was planting the seeds of a Broadway

Back in New York, the romance was over. Once Williams had the script, he then had to get it produced. Finally, after a long seige, Douglas Turner Ward, the artistic director of the Negro Ensemble Company, put the play in a staged reading series. Williams had been a member of the company's Playwright's Workshops for some time, and so his play had found a niche, however small, at NEC.

Next came a full produc-

"I cried. All the rejections and turn-downs going from producer to producer just melted away," Williams said. First, the show opened off-Broadway to rave reviews. It was happening! Then when I found out that the major producing team of McCann-Nugent (the sponsors of "Dracula" and "The and Elephant Man") wanted to move the play to Broadway, I was practically struck dumb. Surely I must be receiving someone else's blessings!"

The play opened at the Cort Theatre on May 7, 1980 and again received rave reviews. The play ran for over 400 performances in New York that season, an exceptional record for a non-musical presentation. In addition, "Heme", nominated for two Tony Awards and the Outer Circle Critics Award for Best Play of the Year, won the 1980 Audelco Award for the highest achievement in the craft of black playwriting and theatre production.

Since then "Home" has been seen in Chicago, Atlanta, Los Angeles, Pittsburgh practically every major city in the country. "Home," a tale whose beginnings hark back to an actor-writer's holiday bus ride down South, has joined "For Colored Girls" and "The River Niger" as one of the most successful and best loved black plays of the past
