Chuck Hinton, Howard University baseball coach, instructs a youngster on the techniques of golf. Hinton, a former major league baseball star with the Washington Senators, is trying to get more blacks interested in golf.

Howard Baseball Coach Teaches Youngsters A Different Swing

by Donnie R. Tuck
As a major league baseball player 11 years with the Washington Senators, Cleveland Indians and California Angels, Chuck Hinton was a hard-swinging .300 hitter, who played every position except pitcher and participated in the 1964 All-Star Game.

As head coach of the Howard University baseball team the past 12 years, Hinton has compiled over 270 victories and has had several players drafted or signed by the pros.

Given his coaching responsibilities with the Howard program and his active involvement with the Major League Players Alumni Association (which he helped found), one would think that Hinton would spend his off-season developing new baseball talent.

Well, that assumption is only partly correct.

This summer, he decided to teach Washington, D.C., youths how to play golf. In fact, Hinton, who was exposed to golf himself as a 28-year-old rookie with the Senators, has become one of the sport's biggest salesmen.

"If I had not played pro baseball, I never would have picked up a golf club," says Hinton. "The Senators had a golf outing during the '62 spring training, and I was teamed up with Lou Worsham, a professional golfer.

"I would hit the ball over to some other fairway, and he would put it on the green. Eventually, he showed me how to make a 40-foot putt with a curve in it. That sold me on the game."

Since that time, Hinton has become an avid golfer, playing at least two tournaments a month for the last seven years. His enjoyment of the game prompted him to introduce it to youngsters.

Hinton and two other members of the D.C. recreation department's "Roving Leaders" program have been going to different neighborhoods throughout Washington instructing about 15 youngsters, aged 12 to 15, in the fundamentals of golf.

"Golf is a rarity to inner-city kids. It's not something they would normally encounter. Basketball and football will always be there for most of them, and even baseball to an extent. What we're trying to say is 'hey, wait a minute, here's something else!'"

The Roving Leaders program deals with hard core youths. Its members do everything from taking the kids camping and fishing to providing personal and family counseling. They also deal with problems of truancy, make court appearances on behalf of some of the youths, and help monitor the halls and playgrounds of the

by Drexel B. Ball
Orby Z. Moss, Jr., a veteran of nine years in athletic administration and currently athletic director at the University of District of Columbia, was named the new athletic director at North Carolina A&T State University. The appointment was announced by Dr. Edward B. Fort, A&T's Chancellor.

Moss' appointment becomes effective September 27. He succeeds Dr. Bert C. Piggot, who stepped down on August 23 in order to return to teaching.

Fort said he is extremely pleased with the selection of Moss as the chief administrator of A&T's Division I athletic program.

"We are greatly pleased with the extraordinarily fine job which the search and screen committee, chaired by Professor Howard Barnhill, did in this selection process," said Fort. "The choice was a tough one, but in the final analysis, I became convinced that only Orby Moss, Jr., Athletic Director at the University of the District of Columbia, is the best man suited to head up our athletic program. He has a superb administrative record, including experiences as an assistant director at Siena Heights College in Michigan and at the University of Wisconsin-Parkside."

Fort noted that Moss' most recent success with the UDC program related to gaining of the NCAA's Division II basketball championship last year.

"We are delighted that Moss has made the decision to come to A&T, and we anticipate that with his leadership skills, our program will continue to move," added Fort.

Moss served as the Firebirds' athletic director the past four years. Moss, 41, has had a dramatic impact in producing positive and winning programs in his short tenure at UDC.

Before moving to UDC, Moss was the athletic director at Siena Heights College of Adrian, Michigan, and the assistant director of physical education and athletics at the University of Wisconsin-Parkside.

His career, first as a coach and then as an administrator, has been highlighted by a succession of outstanding athletes with whom he has worked, including Kim Piper Merritt, 1976 champion of the Boston Marathon for women; Lucina Rosa, an Olympic marathoner who represented Sri Lanka (formerly Ceylon) in 1974 and 1976; and Sue Von Behren, association of intercollegiate athletics national high jump runnerup.

Moss is chiefly responsible for hiring Will Jones as the men's basketball coach at UDC. Under Jones' guidance, the Firebirds last season captured the NCAA Division II national championship.

In his short but illustrious stint at UDC, he brought distinction, credibility and integrity to the then feeble Firebird program, which yielded the spotlight for recognition to the likes of the University of Maryland, Georgetown and American University.

At Siena Heights he helped foster the construction of a new athletic facility played in five Super Bowls, winning two (the last in 1978). They've played in the NFC Championship game—an astronomical eleven times (including the last two) and winning five of those.

The Dallas organization from the top to the cheerleaders is rated as the best in the NFL.

Steelers fans love to point out that although both times that Pitt and Big 'D' have met in the Super Bowl, even though they are two of the best played Super Games, the Steelers won both (21-17 in 1976; 35-31 in 1979).

This brings us back to the woofing going on at the Times.

Don Alderman had this to say recently: "I've never hated the Cowboys. I wanted the Steelers to play them in the Super Bowl because I knew it would be a sure win for the Steelers." On this Monday Night's game, he added, "I kind of want the Steelers to make a late rally and beat them in Dallas. A late drive is one of the most beautiful ways to "win a football game."

Ken Edmonds counters, "It's like I've always said, deep down everyone wants to be a Cowboy!" "Look at what 'Mean' Joe Greene did after he retired from the Steelers. He bought a restaurant in Dallas because he really wanted to be closer to the Cowboys!"

Edmonds adds, "Whoever loses this game (which will be Pittsburgh), their supporters at the Times will have to come in on Tuesday with their heads hung low while the winner's fans (Dallas) will talk it up all week."

Times executive editor Milton Jordan says that he heard from a reliable source that Dallas will beat Pittsburgh 36-0! The hour draws near and around 12 midnight this Monday the verdict will be in on just which team will win and who will just have to eat crow. Stay tuned, sports fans. Oh yeah, you may ask what will I do if the Cowboys win — well, Fresno, California is always nice this time of year!
