Coming Events

THE DURHAM WOMEN'S CENTER will reopen on Saturday October 2, with an Open House-Women's Fair at the YWCA, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

There will be 25 one-hour workshops, films, food, musical entertainment, and free child care. Representatives from a wide range of Durham organizations will be present to display their literature and to discuss their programs.

Some of the workshops to be offered are: Your Legal Job Rights, Carpentry Skills for Women, Fighting Sexual Harassment, Resume Writing, Aerobic Dancing, Women's Labor History, Communication Skills, Astrology. A $1 fee will be charged for each workshop. Lunch will be available for $2.50.

For registration information, call the Women's Center at the YWCA, 688-4396.

THE BLOODMOBILE will be at Carrington Junior High from 3 to 8 p.m., on Thursday, October 7. Call 477-8292 to reserve a time or just come by. This life-saving event is co-sponsored by the Red Cross, N. Durham Rotary Club and the Carrington Community Education Center.

LOU DONALDSON QUARTET — The Sallam Cultural Center, in association with the Black Student Alliance of Duke University, presents the Lou Donaldson Quartet in concert on Friday, October 1, at 8 p.m., in Baldwin Auditorium on Duke's East Campus.

There will be two sets with one admission charge of $5. Advance tickets are available at Page Auditorium Box Office, Regulator Bookshop and NCCU Student Union; Ruthless Records and Oxbow Music in Chapel Hill, the WQDR Store in Raleigh and at the door on the night of the show.

A native of North Carolina and honorary degree holder from A&T State University, Donaldson is one of the foremost proponents of the alto saxophone style of the late Charlie Parker. He has performed and recorded with such luminaries as Art Blakey, Jimmy Smith, Milt Jackson and Thelonious Monk and has led his own band for some 30 years. The present quartet features Herman Foster on piano.

Proceeds from the show will benefit the Sallam Cultural Center, a non-profit corporation promoting jazz and blues in the Triangle area, and the Black Student Alliance of Duke University. For more information, call 684-4154.

THE NEW NEGRO RENAISSANCE — A series of lectures, films and seminars entitled "The 'New Negro' Renaissance: Harlem in the 'Twenties'" is being offered at the Durham County Library through November. This series is co-sponsored by the Duke University Office of Continuing Education and the Durham County Library and is assisted by the North Carolina Humanities Committee. The lectures and films are open free of charge to the public; the seminars are offered for a nominal fee.

Remaining guest speakers in the series will lecture on Jazz musicians (October 6), author Jean Toomer (October 20), and the Harlem Church (November 3). Noted writer and actress Maya Angelou will put in a special appearance at N.C. Central University on November 11, speaking on female writers of the Harlem Renaissance.

Remaining films include an award-winning archival documentary entitled "I Remember Harlem" (November 21), musical short features starring Duke Ellington and Bessie Smith (October 10), "The Emperor Jones," with Paul Robeson (October 10), and the silent melodrama "Scar of Shame" (October 31).

Five-week seminars on various aspects of Harlem Renaissance literature are offered in the daytime and evening and require advance registration.

Details of the entire series are available from the Office of Continuing Education, 107 Bivins, on Duke's East Campus, and main and branch Durham County libraries. For more information call 684-6259.

DUKE FOLK FESTIVAL - Oktoberfest '82 — a new face for an old tradition. A day of festivity, crafts, food, bluegrass music and beer. The outdoor festival is happening on Friday October 1 on the Duke University West Campus between the Bryan Center and the Duke Chapel. Craftspeople welcome to apply. Festival continues in the evening with an exhilarating performance by the Quiet Riot, a comedy mime team. The show begins at 9 p.m. in Reynolds Theater. Tickets are on sale at Page Box Office. For more information call 684-2911.

PARENTS INTERESTED IN ACTIVE INVOLVEMENT in children's education are invited to attend a meeting on October 12, 7-8:30 p.m., at Lakeview Community Education Center, 3507 Dearborn Drive.

NEW COURSE FOR SENIORS — "The Teller of Tales": From Homer's Ithaca to Durham County's Rougemont" is the title of a course beginning at noon on October 6 at the Methodist Church, Red Mountain Road and Highway 501 in Rougemont, 15 miles north of Durham.

Editor-writer Judy Hogan of Chapel Hill will teach the course, which aims to bring alive some of the great stories of the past, beginning with Homer, in the hope of stirring the tale-telling impulse in Durham County seniors. Ms. Hogan will be available before and after the talks to write down stories told to her. Authors covered also include Flaubert, Chaucer, Jane Austen, Zora Neale Hurston, and James Agee.

The course is free and anyone may come to any of the talks. Next week's lecture by Ms. Hogan will be: "Why did Odysseus come home and why was Penelope still there?" The course is funded by the N.C. Humanities Committee, the Durham County Public Library, and the Carolina Wren Press of Chapel Hill. For more information call the Library 683-2626, ext. 31.

DECISIONS: HAVING CHILDREN AFTER 30 is the title of a workshop which will be sponsored by the Counseling Service of Duke's Office of Continuing Education, beginning October 7 at 8 p.m.

This four-week workshop is designed for men and women wanting to clarify concerns and examine priorities surrounding decisions about having children after thirty. Ms. Sibyl Wagner, workshop leader, is experienced in counseling couples in major life change areas.

For further information on fees and registration, call Ms. Darlene Wells, 684-6259, at the Office of Continuing Education.
