

Two Heritage Events Set October 6, 10

Professor Thomas Hennessey of the Department of History at Fayetteville State University, and producer and host of "Jazz Heritage" on WFSS-FM, will speak on the Harlem nightclub scene in the 1920s on Wednesday, October 6, at 8 p.m. in the Durham County Library Auditorium on Roxboro Street. His illustrated lecture will focus on the dilemmas faced by the black jazz musician as he struggled to find a mode of expression acceptable to his own aesthetic impulses as well as to the demands of audiences and adaptation of the Eugene O'Neill play.

The free lecture and the films are part of the series of public programs called "The 'New Negro' Renaissance: Harlem in the 'Twenties,'" co-sponsored by the Duke University Office of Continuing Education and the Durham County Library and funded by the North Carolina Humanities Committee. Black Uhuru

When the radio station owned by Stevie Wonder, Los Angeles' KJLH, recently decided to throw an all-day bash as a thank you for its listeners, topping the star-studded concert was none other than Island recording artists Black Uhuru (left to right, Michael Rose, Puma Jones and Ducky Simpson). Why did KJLH choose the highly acclaimed reggae group to close a show that included such acts as The CBS Jazz All-Stars (with celebrities like Herbie Hancock, Stanley Clarke and George Duke), Alphonse Mouzon and Marilyn Scott? According to a station spokesman, it had to do with Stevie Wonder's affection for reggae, and the fact that Black Uhuru is probably the hottest new reggae group out there. "We thought it would be good to feature a reggae group because of Stevie's involvement with the music, and Black Uhuru seems to be very popular in this area with a growing portion of our audience," the spokesman said.

Black Uhuru's appeal is based on a unique combination of talents. Singers and songwriters Michael Rose and Ducky Simpson are veterans of the Jamaican reggae scene who joined forces with Puma Jones, an American-born former social worker, after Rose heard her singing a Bob Marley song through an open window one day. On bass and drums are Robbie Shakespeare and Sly Dunbar, respectively, the hot rhythm section who backed Peter Tosh and performed on records for everyone from Grace Jones to Joe Cocker.
