

UDI Receives $400,000 Grant

UDI Community Development Corporation (UDI/CDC) received a grant of $400,000 from the U.S. Department of Commerce, Economic Development Administration, according to R. Edward Stewart, executive director for the local development corporation.

Stewart said that the grant funds will be used to provide financial assistance through a Revolving Loan Fund (RLF) program to businesses located or planning to locate in the UDI Industrial Park, if they meet certain criteria. The criteria include the company's track record (unless it is new), a sound development plan, and the potential for success.

"Historically small businesses have always had difficulty in obtaining development and growth capital," Stewart said. The RLF grant is designed to address the situation by serving as a means to leverage private-sector financing for industrial development projects by small and medium-sized industrial firms. The RLF can be effective in bridging the financial gap in the local capital market creating a feasible approach for the small business man to acquire adequate funds for growth and expansion."

The RLF project will have an advisory committee of nine persons knowledgeable in financial and business management, real estate, construction, banking and government policies as they relate to economic practices. This committee will do an analysis of all applicants and make recommendations to the staff and board of UDI/CDC.

The grant represents a total of over $2 million invested in the Industrial Park during the last 12 months from federal and private financial sources. This involves $1.5 million, a mixture of private and federal dollars, designated for acquisition of an additional 50 acres, and infrastructure development to enlarge the Industrial Park to 91 acres, possessing water and sewer lines, underground electric, gas, paved streets and gutters and a rail spur.

UDI Industrial Park has a five-year development plan. Upon its completion, the park is projected to contain 25-30 office and manufacturing facilities with a value of $25 million, and 1000 jobs creating annual income of $10-$12,000,000. The job-creation factor should bring the government a 12-1 return on its investment, Stewart concluded.

UDI Industrial Park currently contains two industries: Northern Telecom and Hydro Services. Stewart projects the Park to contain no less than five operations by the end of 1983, employing 350-400 persons.

"This optimism

exists," he said, "even during these times of economic decline, because of several factors: (1) support of the Chamber of Commerce, (2) industrial recruitment by the state developers, and (3) prime location of the Industrial Park." The location is a major factor, Stewart said, because it is only three minutes away from the Research Triangle Park. "This makes it a major attraction because it is our effort to recruit industry that does not have the sophistication or desire to locate in the Research Triangle Park, but wants to be nearby because it is definitely a growth area," he said.

Stewart acknowledged that $400,000 is not a large amount for a revolving loan program designed to attract industry. "One million dollars is considered the amount needed, but with the cutback in federal programs, we are pleased we were able to get what we did."

Additional publicity will be given the program. The UDI Revolving Loan Fund committee should begin reviewing applications in November.

Darryl Smith Named Outstanding Young Man Of America

When he came to Durham in 1977, Darryl Washington-Smith wasted no time before involving himself in community affairs.

Almost immediately after unpacking his bags, he not only joined two of Durham's major black organizations, but also took active leadership roles in them, serving on the executive committee of both the local NAACP branch and the Durham Chapter of the National Black Child Development Institute.

He soon became a member of the N.C. Association of Black Lawyers and a charter member of the Durham Chapter of the National Black Child Development Institute.

With these and many other notches in his community outreach belt, Smith, an assistant district attorney for Durham County, was recently selected to be included in the 1982 edition of Outstanding Young Men of America, a publication listing with biographical sketches young men who have contributed "beyond the call of duty" to the improvement of their community, state and nation.

"I'm pleased," Smith said during a brief interview, "that my activities have been recognized; that I was selected for 'his award. Hopefully, it will be a positive role model for young people, a catalyst to spur them to become more involved." Smith is among several libraries across the country named "Outstanding Young Men of America". The award is sponsored by Outstanding Americans, Inc., an Alabama-based organization that promotes community and civic involvement by young professionals.

According to organizational literature, selections were made from the nation's governors, congressmen, lawyers, senators, college presidents, among other professionals who branch out beyond their daily occupations to contribute to the nation's well-being.

The publication, according to literature, will be complete later this month and will be available in public libraries across the country.

Smith, who has been with the local district attorney's office since 1978, received his undergraduate degree from Boston University and his law degree from Catholic University in Washington, D.C.

He is also a member of the American Bar Association, the young lawyers section of the N.C. Bar, and the 14th Judicial District Bar Association.

He has served on the Advisory Committee for WTVD-Channel 11, and organized a conference entitled "Justice and the Poor" while working with the Central Legal Assistance Program of Durham.
