Gary Coleman Named Child of the Year

Gary Coleman, star of "Diff'rent Strokes", was named Child of the Year recently by ICAN Associates at a dinner dance held in Beverly Hills.

ICAN Associates is a privately supported charitable organization formed to raise funds and public awareness to combat child abuse. It supports community-based child abuse prevention and treatment programs and operates six Neighborhood Family Centers in the Los Angeles area. The organization works in cooperation with the Inter-Agency Council on Child Abuse and Neglect, from which it derives it name ICAN.

Roxie Roker, star of "The Jeffersons" and vice president of the organization, said in presenting the award to Coleman: "Gary also serves as National Chairman of the Kidney Foundation. He lifted the spirits of the abused and neglected children MacLaren Hall last year. His interaction with each child at ICAN/MacLaren Christmas party was heartwarming. He then went home and built an electric train set for the children at the hall. He represents an inspiration to all of us for many reasons."

In accepting the award from Roker and surprise guest Conrad Bain, who plays his father in "Diff'rent Strokes," normally talkative Coleman said, "Arnold the big mouth can't think of anything to say. However, it did give me pleasure to give the kids the train set. And I'm happy to receive this award.'
