

CARING FOR FRUIT TREES during the fall and winter months is important to assure an abundant crop next summer, says fruit grower Robert Hampton. The RJR Archer mill operator has been tending his orchard for ten years. He now has more than 15 apple trees and a variety of other fruit trees on his property.

Caring For Fruit Trees In Year-Round Job

PILOT MOUNTAIN one bad apple spoiling the whole barrel. Experience tells him it's Hampton is spending this fall looking for "bad apples" while preparing his more than 30 fruit trees and grape vines for winter at his Pilot Mountain (NC) home.

Hampton, a mill operator for RJR Archer, Inc. in Winston-Salem, first planted an apple tree in his backyard ten years ago. Today, his orchard includes trees bearing apples, peaches, plums, cherries, pears, apricots and nectarines, plus six grape vines.

Tending an orchard, especially on a part-time basis, is not an easy task, Hampton says. Caring for fruit trees is a year-round job. Even though the growing season is ending, a new season of work awaits Hampton and other fruit growers.

If you don't have any fruit trees, now is the time to consider buying seedlings and planting them, Hampton says. "Fall is the best time of year to plant fruit trees. This gives the tree a good start before the spring growing season," he says.

For those who already have fruit trees, Hampton offers some reminders to prepare trees for the winter months.

- Spray trees with carefully selected herbicides and pesticides to prevent winter insects and diseases from causing damage.

- Prune trees in late fall or winter after all leaves have fallen and sap has run to the bottom of the tree.

- Continue to pick up fallen fruit around the trees. If left, the fruit can attract pesky rodents and other small animals that might harm the trees.

- Throughout the winter, make periodic checks on your trees to be sure that rodents, rabbits or other animals are not eating bark off trees.

- Heavy ice and snow can weigh down branches, causing them to break off. Check trees and remove ice or snow if either appears to place excessive weight on branches.

Don't worry, though, about cold weather hurt-

Dr. Samuel D. Proctor To Be NCCU Founder's Day Speaker

Dr. Samuel D. Proctor, who holds the Martin Luther King Memorial Chair in the Graduate School of Education at Rutgers University, will be the principal speaker at North Carolina Central University's Founder's Day exercises at 11 a.m., Friday, November 5, in the university's B.N. Duke Auditorium.

Dr. Proctor is also the senior minister of the Abyssinian Baptist Church in New York City.

Founder's Day commemorates the late Dr. James E. Shepard, who founded NCCU in 1910 as the National Religious Training School and Chautauqua.

Dr. Shepard served as the president of the school until his death in 1947. The 1982 Founder's Day is one month after the 35th anniversary of Dr. Shepard's death, which occurred on October 6, 1947.

The occasion will also be the last Founder's Day in the tenure of Chancellor Albert N. Whiting, who will retire in June, 1983. By the date of his retirement, Dr. Whiting will have served as the institution's chief administrator longer than anyone other than Dr. Shepard.

Founder's Day is planned by a committee of students, faculty, and staff members headed by Dr. Tyrone Baines, vice chancellor for university relations.

Dr. Proctor is a Virginian, an alumnus of Virginia Union University, Crozer Seminary, and Boston University, where he earned the doctorate in ethics. He has done graduate study at the University of Pennsylvania, at Yale University, and in the Harvard Institute for University Administration.

Dr. Proctor began his career as a minister in the Pond Street Baptist Church in Providence, R.I. in 1945. He became a teacher and dean at Virginia Union University in 1949.

He served as president of Virginia Union University from 1955 to 1960 and as president of North Carolina A&T State University from 1960 to 1964. From 1964 to 1969, he held administrative positions with the Peace Corps (in Nigeria and Washington), with the National Council of Churches, the Office of Economic Opportunity, the Institute for Services to Education, and the University of Wisconsin.

He is the author of The Young Negro in America 1960-80, published in 1966.

ting your trees during the winter months, Hampton adds. "In fact, the colder the winter, the better. Trees thrive after a cold winter. The cold usually kills most of the insects and diseases that can harm a tree," he says.

Hampton takes pride in the quality of fruit from his orchard. Each year, weather permitting, his orchard produces plenty of fruit for his family, neighbors and co-workers. What is left is sold at a roadside fruit stand.

"The key to a successful harvest, though, begins with good year-round care," Hampton says. "The effort and time you take this fall will pay off with healthy trees and abundant fruit next summer."
