

Deltas Hold Christmas Party For Senior Citizens

DELTA HOSTESSES FOR PARTY

SENIOR CITIZENS WATCH PROGRAM

Durham Alumnae Chapter, Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Inc., held its annual Christmas party for senior citizens at W.D. Hill Recreation Center, Sunday afternoon, December 12. Members of Alpha Lambda Chapter, DST, from NCCU joined Durham Alumnae in providing entertainment. Approximately fifty senior citizens were in attendance.

A delightful program was presented which included gymnastics and modern dances set to Christmas carols performed by Ms. Nancy Pinckney. Traditional guessing games, tall tales and Christmas caroling were also featured. In addition to several door prizes which were given away, each senior citizen received a gift.

Mrs. Millie Snider served as chairman of the affair.

CLOSEST GUESS — Mrs. Ruth Thomas presents jar of pennies to Kenneth Smith who made the closest guess of the total number of pennies in the jar.

THE NORTH CAROLINA CENTRAL UNIVERSITY SECRETARIAL-CLERICAL CLUB recognized the contributions of a group of Charter Members at the annual meeting held last week. Mrs. Mary Scott, president of the club paid tribute to the leadership and inspiration of the honorees. They are (l-r): Mrs. Edna Harrington, Dr. Davesene Spellman, Mrs. Aletha Rease, Mrs. Grace Cooke and Mrs. Velma Wilson.

demonstrate against Barry Goldwater's anti-civil rights position. Two police officers saw to it that Greenberg and his group were permitted to conduct their protest in a peaceful manner — without getting arrested. This incident won Greenberg's respect for the police profession and sparked his interest in carving out a police career for himself. Before coming to

Charleston, he served as Chief Deputy in the Orange County (Florida) sheriff's department; as police chief in Opalocka, Fla.; and as a police major in Savannah, Ga. Charleston's police chief is quickly gaining a reputation for being tough on crime and strongly opposed to probation procedures. He believes that criminals should serve their full sentences, without any probation. His dream for Charleston is that everyone should be able to walk the streets of the city without fear of criminal attack.

South's First Black Jewish Police Chief

CHARLESTON, S.C. — Reuben Morris Greenberg, 39, is causing no little tumult in this southern city of 70,000. Greenberg, a 15-year police veteran, is Charleston's first black Jewish police chief, appointed earlier this year by a 12-0 vote of Charleston's City Council.

Chief Greenberg traces his ethnic identity to his Russian Jewish great-grandfather, who immigrated to Texas, established himself as a wheat farmer and lived in a common-law marriage with a black woman. While attending San Francisco State College, Reuben Greenberg sought to discover his Jewish roots when he realized that most of his fellow civil rights activists were also Jewish. This led to formal Jewish religious instruction.

It is not easy to be a black Jew in a southern city, especially if you are the chief of police. Greenberg's Jewishness, and the fact that he is also black, has become the subject of some tasteless jokes. Shortly after he won appointment to his post, the favorite question among some of Charleston's citizens was, "What is chief's favorite food?" Answer: "Fried chicken soup."

The local Ku Klux Klan was less subtle, calling Greenberg "nigger Jew". Greenberg is philosophical about it. "These people were opposed to me before I was born," he says.

Greenberg's desire to join the ranks of police stemmed from his early days as a civil rights activist in 1964, when he and some classmates at San Francisco State went to the Republican National Convention to
