Aggies Should Win MEAC Crown Alcorn Gets Nod in the SWAC

Some things never change. Over the years, North Carolina A&T and Alcorn State have been among the most dominant teams in black college basketball, and it should remain that way this season.

This year, both A&T and Alcorn should advance to the NCAA Division I tournament by virtue of winning league titles. A&T should win in the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference, with Alcorn handling the Southwestern Athletic Conference.

The MEAC race should go like this:

1. North Carolina A&T
2. Florida A&M
3. South Carolina State
4. Howard
5. Bethune-Cookman
6. Delaware State
7. Maryland-Eastern Shore

A&T posted 19-9 record last year and made its first visit ever to the NCAA tournament. The Aggies return four starters from that club, including MEAC player of the year, Joe Binion. He averaged 19.1 points and 9.2 rebounds per game last year.

FAMU (10-17) has almost a totally new club, with nine new players joining the fold. Back is all-MEAC pick Michael Toomer, a 6-8 junior center who averaged 12.4 points and 10.9 rebounds.

South Carolina State (10-15) continues a rebuilding program under coach Johnny Jones. Only two starters return, though, meaning the foundation is still being set. Howard (17-11) loses four starters from last year's team, and must prove itself again. The sole returnee is Bernard Perry, a 6-5 guard. Bethune-Cookman (10-18) will be a short, scrappy club again, while Delaware State (13-13) hopes to break into the conference's elite. Maryland-Eastern Shore (6-20) is still building.

In the SWAC, it should go like this:

1. Alcorn State
2. Alabama State
3. Grambling
4. Jackson State
5. Southern
6. Texas Southern
7. Mississippi Valley
8. Prairie View

GUNNING IN AND OUT

In these pictures, NCCU Eagles show that they can gun with the best of them inside and outside. In the top picture, Walt Hughey (25) a 5'10" guard tosses up one from way out late in the game.

In the bottom picture, David Binion, a 6'6" forward moves inside against a St. Augustine's defender.
