Plain Value in Large Measure

"HE money you spend for a Goodyear Cord Tire buys just the tire. Every penny of it is exchanged for its equivalent in tire value, nothing else.

Delusive discounts, definite mileage guarantees, "free' service and like fictitious inducements go by the boards in such a purchase.

You pay for the good that is in the tire, and only that—for mileage, comfort and the sure satisfaction such goodness means not for manufacturers' insurance, not for sales promotion "discounts," not for so-called "free" service.

And Goodyear Cord Tire sales persist and increase without need of these artificial attractions.

To those who judge on performance, the tires themselves are attraction enough.

The greater comfort they provide, the economies in gasoline and operating costs they assure, the longer mileage they deliver—these are inducements effective beyond all others.

If you would enjoy the advantages of a tire in which distinction is matched by endurance, activity balanced by security, flexibility buttressed by strength buy Goodyear Cords.

Their slightly higher price is far outweighed by their vastly greater worth.
