Is it worth while to burn the candle at both ends, and in the middle also, as some do, to make money at the expense of one's health? The pace so many travel cuts off hundreds of people every year just at the time when they should be getting the best good out of life. The making of money is all right providing that common sense governs one in the making of it.

In the olden time the reverence for the homestead and the love felt for the old home were so great that even the thought of leaving it seemed a sacrilege. In the present day families, as a rule, have no compunction in selling the old home in which they and their ancestors were born provided they can make money by the sale. That this is so is a pity for it indicates a decay of sentiment and a weakening of family ties.

For the Benefit of Both.

A thorough co-operation between the dwellers in the town and the dwellers in the country is needed to promote the best interests of both classes. Each needs the other. The social and business center of the farmer is naturally the town most convenient to reach and usually that is the town that is nearest his home. It is there he gets the best local market, for even if he sometimes can get a little better price for his produce at some other point that gain is offset by increased travel, and wear and tear.

So in the matter of buying. If he thinks he can buy more cheaply at a mail order house, which he may possibly do in a few things, he should remember that the mail order house never buys a dollar's worth of his produce, and that every dollar spent with them helps to depreciate the value of his home market and that means a loss to him. It also means fewer social attractions for his family.

It is the duty of the merchant and of the people generally to make the town worth while for the farmer to visit and to buy and sell in. Some towns have ruined themselves because they have neglected this necessary fact. They thought the farmer must of necessity come to them whether their town was attractive or other wise, and their business men had the idea that they could keep any old kind of goods on their shelves and that the farmer would have to buy them, and they have been very sore when the farmers did business elsewhere. That does not apply to this town where the merchants are alive to the best interests of their customers, both town and country, and where they are getting a fair return for their enterprise and sagacity.

So too, in the matter of attractiveness this town does well in that modern improvements, good streets and walks, good residences and other things that speak of taste and refinement, appeal to the intelligent farmer and his family. It is by the development of these things on the part of both the farmer and the urbanite that the welfare of both is advanced.

$100 REWARD, $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Wake Forest News.

Dr. Thomas E. Greene, Vice President of the American Peace Society, made a very instructive, and intensely interesting address to the student body, and citizens of the town on last Friday night. Dr. Greene came here under the auspices of the College Lecture Course. The material of his speech was made up entirely of personal experience and observation, as he only recently returned to the United States from a tour around the world. The subject for the evening was "The Peace That Failed."

He deals mainly on the subject of war, drawing a very interesting picture of the present war in Europe. The speaker indorsing the present war said that at the expiration of the 200th day of actual warfare $70,000,000,000 had been spent by the warring nations. "Ten minutes of war in Europe," said Dr. Greene, has torn down the work of a hundred years.

Dr. Greene closed by saying that Europe will one day brush away the dust from her eyes, and ask to be shown the way that leads to peace. "But nations will speak of the peaceful America for centuries to come. They may not say that she is the greatest nation in the world; they may not say that she is the richest nation in the world; but will say what all the world will be glad to spread and glorify, "America, the peacemaker of the world."

Revival services have been conducted at the Baptist church for the last two weeks, and is continuing during this week. Dr. Cullam has had charge of the work, and much spirit and enthusiasm has been manifested by the people of the town as well as by the students. Each class period in the morning has been cut five minutes and the noon hour has been turned into a devotional meeting, and made optional. This will continue indefinitely, and the revival will continue for some time yet.

In the last game of foot ball before the annual game with Davidson on Thanksgiving day, Wake Forest was defeated by Carolina 12 to 7 Saturday November 14th. The University team was given an unexpected surprise, and did good to win the game. Predictions prior to the game ranged anywhere from 60 to 80 against Wake Forest nothing.

At the very beginning of the game, after forcing Carolina to punt, the Wake Forest eleven by two beautifully executed forward passes and several line bucks, carried the ball over for the first touchdown, which was followed by goal by Billings. In the second quarter by the aid of penalties, and poor punting by Moore, Carolina recured her first touchdown, but failed at goal. Again in the fourth quarter by a series of line plunges, and penalties approximating about fifty yards Carolina again fanned the ball over, and again failed to kick goal. Rain fell in torrents during the last three quarters of play, and it was difficult for either team to pull off any passes, the mainstay of the Wake Forest eleven.

As a result of the good showing made by Wake Forest against the heavy Carolina team Saturday, enthusiasm is running high here in anticipation of the Thanksgiving game. It is generally conceded that Davidson has the odds, but Coach Smith says if his men show the same spirit displayed in the Carolina game that Wake Forest will give Davidson a run for the money.
