

SOME HARD QUESTIONS—ANSWER THEM

(By J. R. Wilder, Tunis, N. C.)

A little boy came into my office recently to mail a letter, two cents involved, just as a lady applied for a postoffice money order for $15.00. Who should have been served first? The boy applied first. After securing the stamp he had nothing to do but go home and play. The lady wished to catch the next train—had no time to lose.

A poorly dressed lady entered the church. Nearly all the seats had been taken. She had great difficulty in obtaining a seat. Just then a deacon of influence from another church entered. A good deacon, in our church seeing him, lost no time in securing him a comfortable seat. Did the good deacon act wisely? Consider everything involved and answer.

Bro. Freeman is poor; has to work hard to support his invalid wife and four small children. He lives six miles from the church. His mule that toils and plows his crop is old and poor. Brother Freeman gets to his conference about once every quarter. He does not contribute much for church expense or the new pastor; he sits in the rear of the church. The new pastor don't know him; has never met him personally, having had no opportunity for an introduction.

Bro. Williams never fails to answer when his name is called in conference. His Oldsmobile is seldom out of fix; his business is prosperous. His dollars are spent freely in his Master's kingdom. The new pastor had no trouble in forming his acquaintance; they are very familiar to each other, while he don't even know the other brother. Explain the duty of both. Is there a remedy? Where is it? What is it?

Mrs. Jones while living in the country, always delighted in the church service; never failed to be there when the opportunity afforded. She moved to the city, where she knew nobody and nobody knew her. As Sunday came, as was her wont she went to church. Nobody even saw her, nobody spoke to her. She did not know the reason. It must be the thought because her dress was not so fine and nice as those of the city ladies. It made her feel timid and embarrassed, although she made another venture on the following Sunday morning and received the same contempt. On the next Sunday she totally absented herself from public worship. For several Sundays she stayed at home but she finally decided that she must go to the church; so next Sunday found her there, but to receive the very same indifference. Nobody ever seemed to see or notice her. After this, two whole years of her life which might have been spent in usefulness was spent at home, much of the time in the reading of trashy novels. Who is to blame? What is the remedy? Can we apply it?

A tramp without friends or money, traveling in a strange country on a cold, dark night, continued applying for shelter and a night's rest at every home he passed, meeting with the very same response—a denial. Finally, arriving at one house, as he raised his hand to ring the door bell, he heard the sound of a voice inside. He stayed his hand and listened. Lo and behold, it was the husband and father having family prayer. "Thanks to goodness," thought the poor tramp, "I have at last fell among christian people. I will at last be taken in." Walking up to the door, after amen was said, he rang the bell. The gentleman came to the door. On finding out his business, remarked "I don't take in strangers," slammed the door and was gone back inside. The tramp left that house an infidel, to live and die one. What's our christian duty, even toward a tramp? Answer me.

"Oh the good we might do while the days are going by. There are weary souls that are perishing for the lack of some kind word. Rescue the perishing, care for the dying; tell them of Jesus the mighty to save; Rescue the perishing, duty demands it. Strength for thy labor, the Lord will provide. Back to the narrow way, patiently win them. Tell the poor wanderer a Savior has died."

—FALL PLOWING—

(By H. L. Miller, Co. Agent)

Our average rainfall in North Carolina is enough to grow and mature two or three bumper crops each year if it were only properly conserved. In spite of our heavy rainfall, we see many acres wither up and almost totally fail each year due to the lack of moisture. We usually blame this on providence, but it's our fault. Providence or nature provides an abundance of rain every year and its own problem to store up this moisture for the plants to draw on during the hot months of July and August when we usually have a dry spell.

Deep fall plowing, with a provision made each of the years to add some organic matter to the soil, is the solution and the only solution to the moisture problem we face every summer.

If you will plow your land deep in the fall and then subsoil it and harrow in oats or rye to afford a cover crop and to have some vegetation to turn into the soil in the spring and will follow this practice for two or three years, you can make your crops with little or no rain after planting time by simply keeping the top soil stirred to prevent loss of moisture by evaporation.

Plan to do and do some fall plowing, deep.
