STUDY MADE BY SPECIALISTS

Far the Greatest Number of Structures Are Erected Through the United Effort of People

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

To assist rural organizations in working out ways of financing and maintaining community buildings, the United States Department of Agriculture has just published Farmers' Bulletin 1122, The Organization of Rural Community Buildings. This is the third of a series of builetins on rural community Buildings, based on an intimate study made by specialists of the department of more than 200 such the department of more than 200 such buildings in all parts of the country. The first, Department Bulletin 825, Rural Community Buildings in the United States, gives a history of the movement, treats of some of the gen-

Methods of Financing. It is pointed out in this third bulletin that though community buildings are financed in a number of ways, as individual donations, local industry, well-established, social or fraternal organizations, by far the greatest number are erected through the united effort of interested people and various organizations of the community. When the latter plan is employed the necessary money is obtained either by vol-untary contributions or by the sale of stock. Subscriptions are paid in the form of money, labor or
