GALILEO

In the town of Pisa, where stands the leaning tower, one Galileo demonstrated an amazed world that two stones, one small, one large, fell at the same rate of speed. He also perfected, if he did not invent, the first telescope, first turned it upon the moon, first discovered the moons of Jupiter. And he first defended before the church the Copernican theory, that the earth was round, when all respectable citizens, including the priests, knew perfectly well it was flat!

For these and other high crimes, the Catholic Church punished Galileo severely, who saved his life by recanting publicly his doctrine that the earth moved. Tradition has it that, after he had done so, he muttered into his beard, "And yet it does move!"

However that may be, Cardinal Maffi, of Pisa, a scientist, is behind the movement to erect in the public square of Pisa a great monument to the man all the world acclaims as one of the world thinkers and great leaders of all time in science and clear thinking.

Galileo lived in 1564-1642. This is 1922. It took Pisa in general and the church in particular quite a time to recognize that even churches err! Better late than never!

FIND ANCIENT SCRIPT

Writing Similar to Chinese Discovered in Idaho.

Scientists Will Explore Caves and Decipher the Writing Before Revealing Location—May Find Valuable Relics.

Boise, Idaho.—Symbols and signs, chiseled, it is believed, ages ago, were discovered recently on lava rocks in a remote section of Owyhee county, southwestern Idaho.

Many of the inscriptions bear striking resemblance to Chinese alphabet characters of today, it was said, although archeologists say they may be anywhere from 400 to 30,000 years old.

Discovery of the inscriptions, which are said to be a mine of archeological treasure, was made by Robert Limbert, a Boise taxidermist. Their exact location will not be made public until they are examined thoroughly this summer by a number of scientists who are coming here.

The volcanic rock on which the inscriptions are carved is scattered over a 30-acre sagebrush flat. In the immediate vicinity are several large caves, around the entrance of which the rocks also are inscribed. It is believed these caves never have been explored. Possibly, it is said, they contain many relics of scientific value.

Two distinct types of carvings, ideographic and pictographic, have been noted. Archeologists believe the ideographic antedates by many years the pictographic. Both systems have been found together on one rock and near them can be discerned what appears to be a third system, supposed to antedate both of the others, but which has weathered beyond possibility of deciphering.

Clear bits of this prehistoric writing are found on one huge water-worn boulder 25 feet long, 14 feet wide and 5 feet high. Near the center is a series of triangles believed to indicate Indian tepees, and next to them are rows of dots and dashes, thought to be numerals.

Resemblance of many of the inscriptions to the characters of the Chinese alphabet was taken by some to substantiate the theory that the North American native descended from a race which came from Asia by way of Bering straits.

Indians now living in Idaho, when questioned regarding the carvings, say the more modern or pictographic are the work of their forefathers, but they assert the others to be the work of spirits.
