COGGIN-BRITTON

The most important social event of the week was the marriage of Miss Mary Lucille Britton to Mr. James Kirk Coggin of Albermarle, North Carolina. The ceremony was performed by Rev. R. B. Lineberry, pastor of the bride, at the beautiful home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. Roy Britton, Tuesday, June the sixth at 7:30 a. m. Only the relatives and intimate friends of the family witnessed the ceremony.

Simplicity and dignity characterized the entire wedding. The parlor and home were artistically decorated with a profusion of potted plants and cut flowers, consisting of sweet peas, daisies, red French poppies and a lovely wedding bell of Shasta daisies hung from the archway. Interspersed among the green were many candles, whose soft glow cast a beautiful radiance over the scene.

The wedding march was rendered by Miss Inez Benthall of Woodland. Just before the ceremony Mr. James Austin Long of Colerain sang "Oh Promise Me." The first to enter were little Miss Jane Eaton, niece of the groom, daintily frocked in pink, carrying a beautiful basket of bride's roses, acting as flower girl, and little Master William Shaw, cousin of the bride, dressed in a white satin suit, was ring bearer, and carried the ring on a white satin pillow, placed in a silver tray. They were followed by the maid of honor, Miss Ruth Shaw Britton, sister of the bride who was becomingly dressed in yellow organdy and wore a corsage of Killarney roses and lily of the valley.

The groom entered with his best man, Mr. Brantley Wamble of Raleigh, N. C.

Next came the bride with her father. She charmingly dressed in a going-away suit of dark blue tricotine with blue hat, and lovely accessories to match and carried an arm bouquet of bride's roses and lily of the valley.

The bride is both beautiful and accomplished. She has a large circle of admiring friends who wish for her a long and prosperous life. For the past three years she has held an important position in the Domestic Science Department in the Cary High School at Cary, N. C. It was there that their romance began. Mr. Coggin also is a prominent member of the Cary High School faculty. He is a young man of sterling qualities, and is popular in both social and business circles.

The wedding gifts were handsome and numerous, the display of silver being especially worthy of mention.

Amid a shower of rice and good wishes, Mr. and Mrs. Coggin left for a ten day's trip through western North Carolina, after which they will be at home to their many friends at Cary, N. C., at which place they have a handsome bungalow under construction.

Among the guests from a distance were Mrs. W. H. Eaton, sister of the groom, and little daughter, Jane of Auburn, Ala.; Prof. and Mrs. M. B. Drey of Cary High School; Miss Inez Benthall of Woodland; Miss Lillian Shaw of Winton; Mr. Brantley Wamble of Raleigh; Mrs. W. P. Shaw, grandmother of the bride, of Winton; Mrs. John Shaw, and son William, of Winton and Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Britton of Norfolk.

FLY TIME

If we are ready to do our part for a flyless town we will have but the simple job of cleaning up the filth, and attacking the flies in the breeding places. One of the biggest points for the breeding of flies is in the stables, and there is hardly any mistaking the fact that an enforcement of the city law in this matter should be expected or certainly at this season when they are breeding and swarming. It is true that clean-up process is rather annoying and vexing but likewise flies about the kitchens, the meat markets and the groceries are worse than vexing, they are dangerous to the city's health. If you have a cess-pool or a stable that is on your premises you have a duty to the citizenship to see that it is kept in condition of least menace to the public health.—Rocky Mount Telegram.

WHAT A DOLLAR WILL DO

Roger W. Babson, the well-known financial statistician, tells the tale of a dollar in the following way.
 "One dollar spent for a lunch, lasts five hours. One dollar spent for a necktie lasts five weeks.
 "One dollar spent for a cap lasts five months. One dollar spent for an automobile lasts five years. One dollar spent for a water power or a railroad grade, lasts five generations.
 "One dollar spent in the service of God, lasts for eternity."—Exchange.

IN GOWNS OF DISTINCTION THE MATRON TRIUMPHS

MERELY to think of a dress, for dress-up times, gives one a crepey feeling, it appears. For crepes, in their various weaves, remain unrivaled and so far, even unchallenged. Everywhere in afternoon and evening gatherings they predominate, making a pleasant color harmony in shades of blue, beige, gray, green, rust and brown, with black interspersed rather plentifully among them. No fabric is better adapted to the demands of the matron who looks for long and graceful lines and is devoted to clever and original ideas in designing.

A gown that will score a success on every one of these requirements appears in the handsome model pictured. It is made of French gray crepe and, except for gray beads, the material is sufficient unto itself in interpreting the present mode superbly. Narrow folds of the crepe, dotted with beads, are simple as can be, but they contrive an original and beautiful adornment. Set in between two wider folds they form the girdle. This gown may be worn over a sheer, lace-trimmed slip (shorter in length) in flesh color, or in white posed over a light pink underslip. Beaded trimmings, used with fine restraint, fringes and trimmings made of the material, characterize these crepe gowns. They obey the dictates of fashion gracefully, with skirts ankle-length and low waist lines. But the uneven hem line and such transparent devices as appear in the gown pictured, betray that the shorter skirt is held in fond remembrance. Sleeves are endlessly varied, neck lines fairly high, all conspiring to please the woman who has learned to value distinction.

LINGERIE IS LESS TRIMMED BUT IS MORE COLORFUL

THERE is considerable news in the realm of underwear. It concerns chiefly the adoption of many colors in place of white and consequent changes in the matter of decorations. Little by little white has given way before the encroachment of light tones of color, until colored underthings appear to outnumber the white garments. As the attention of designers is focused on color, it turns away from familiar types of trimmings, to new ones, introducing color contrasts, and we have lingerie that is less trimmed and more tailored in style, but nevertheless pretty and practical. Color will never usurp the place of fine hand made and hand decorated undergarments on which much expert needlework has been lavished; it is without peer in refinement and beauty.

The closest rival of this fine, white lingerie in sheer cottons, is flesh colored, and made of crepe de chine, and the two pretty garments shown here vindicate its right to a place in the bride's trousseau. There is nothing unusual about them and the picture tells the story. For those who would like to add some up-to-the-minute pieces to their collection, tailored styles in pongee, trimmed with borders of colored silk or embroidered in large dots in different colors of silk are suggested. Envelope chemise in pongee, with a band an inch wide in lavender or other color of crepe de chine about the top, has shoulder straps to match made up of a fold of the crepe, and the step-in drawers are bordered in the same way.

Pretty and simple night dresses are made of cross bar dimity or batiste, showing a bar in color on a white ground. They are cut with square neck and short sleeves and narrow, wash ribbon, in the color of the cross-bar, is applied in rows or lattice design about the neck and sleeves. Plisse crepe is shown in many colors, as pink, orchid, yellow, blue, light green, lavender, and is especially liked for night dresses and pajamas. Hemstitching and shirings done in colored threads, make the simplest decorations for garments of colored batiste. Several colors are combined in this way, as in a lavender chemise shirred at the neck line with three rows of shirings, using rose, blue, and pale green threads.
