WHERE IS PEARLINE?

Pearline was once known to every housewife, but where is the housewife that thinks of Pearline today? The chances are she never heard of it, or will have to stop and think just what Pearline was. When the manufacturer of Pearline died, as the story in the advertisement was told, those who succeeded him thought that it did not need any further advertising. "People know all about it, and what is the use of further expenditure," they argued.

There are business men everywhere who often take the same view of the situation.

They argue that the advertising they have already done has caused the people to become well acquainted with them.

"The people know where we are," they say, and so they snuggle down into the cocoon they have builded—and in a few years, sometimes not that long, they are forgotten. "The fact of the matter is," said a business man to us a short time ago, "if you get business today you have got to go after it. And one of the best methods in the world is to advertise for it."

pointment at Greens Cross last Saturday and Sunday.

NEW USE FOR GOATS

At the convention of the American Institute of Homeopathy in Chicago last week a new use for goats and sheep was outlined by the doctors. It was said that the "transplantation of glands and the injection of extracts from them into human beings is now beyond the realm of experimentation; it has been discovered that if the extract of the super-renal gland of the goat or sheep is fed to or injected hypodermically into a lazy person he or she will become immediately "the personification of energy, ambition and industry." Let us raise more goat or sheep is fed to or injected need their glands.

$40,000

WOULDN'T you like to put your boy in the way of receiving $40,000 in excess earnings? A college education will do this in the vast majority of cases. Statistics show that college men on an average earn $1,000 a year more than other men. During 40 years of business life this will mean $40,000 in extra earnings. The Equitable's special Educational Fund policy will assure a college education to your boy, whether you live or die.
