IN THE WORLD OF FASHION
AIRY WHITE GAINS GROUND

SOFT and white georgette crepe, with set-in bands of fine, embroidered net, make the lovely frock shown here. It is one of many airy dresses (made for girl graduates) that prove the irresistible and unending charm of sheer white and its fitness for eminent occasions. The design is suited to evening dresses and is very simple, with drapery of the georgette, in cascaded panels, at the sides, and slashes in the sleeves between the net and georgette. The arms slip through them and the sleeves proclaim that the designer is conversant with the modes of the hour and couples good taste with imagination.

As summer advances white gains ground in every direction. Clothes for actual sports and for all out-dooring are employing white fabrics that range all the way from heavy cottons and linens, as in tennis skirts, to rough-surfaced, rich silk crepes for pastime wear. Evening dresses of white chiffon are as airy as the fairy globe of the dandelion, and all these white clothes possess a refinement that belongs, in the same degree, to nothing else.

Skirts and one-piece frocks in the heavy, silk crepe weaves are among the most useful of summer belongings. One is well enough dressed in them, for any smart social gathering—but their character is informal—they go everywhere. As a companion piece to a handsome sweater-coat in white or a color, the skirts of out-dooring silks are a joy forever—till the end of the season anyway.

White organdie and fine white voile make afternoon frocks that include bouffant lines on one hand or lovely and subtle draperies on the other. Drawn work, pin tucks, frills and narrow ribbons are used on them in painstaking decorative work that is merited by the fineness of the material.

Just now plain white crepe de chine finds itself in the spotlight of interest. Nearly all the frocks made of it are draped, but very little trimmed, and their lines are straight as a whole but graceful in detail. Crepe de chine looks cool and is cool.

EMBROIDERIES ON BLOUSES LEAD IN TRIMMING DEVICES

IT IS between "hay and grass" in blouse styles, when manufacturers are busy making those things that are in demand and at the same time toning up their products by little variations of trimmings, and in other particulars. These late summer blouses fill in a transition period before the introduction of fall models and give us little hints of what is to follow. Judging from them crepe de chine is cast for the star part in materials for fall, with georgette, crepe satin and canton crepe supporting it and important roles assigned to knitted silk materials and to velvet.

New arrivals indicate that designers are still devoted to the low waist-line and over-the-skirt styles, and that sleeves are to be featured. Embroideries remain, but they are to be supplemented by other trimming devices, often used in conjunction with them, as beads and silks are used together. Rows of small buttons, pipings and insets in contrasting colors, are heralded by the latest blouses, and sleeves that are wholly or in part of a different material and color from the blouse.

Whoever finds it necessary to acquire a new blouse may play safe by choosing one like either one of the two pretty models pictured. They are both of crepe de chine and both embroidered. The blouse at the left, in dark blue, is cut in simple kimono style, and has its sleeves and hem line finished by a battlement edge. Dark blue silk, dark red beads, and a little tinsel thread make up the very effective and simple embroidery.

Blaque colored crepe de chine in the other blouse sets off navy silk embroidery. The model hangs straight, has set-in sleeves and round neck; a crepe-covered cord forms a loose girdle. The lines in this blouse are flattering to full figures which they slenderize.

WHY LOSE SALES?

By slow freight when one of the largest Wholesale Grocery concerns in Eastern North Carolina is located right here among you with a complete line of everything a retail grocer carries to meet the demand of his customers

It is not only our desire to serve you better than the average wholesaler, but it is our pleasure to do so.

We buy in carload lots, and by so doing we are in a position not only to serve you better, but to serve you at a closer figure, considering the high freight rates you will have to pay if you buy from foreign concerns.
