GLACIERS AT THE EQUATOR

We do not usually think of glaciers in connection with "darkest Africa" or any other part of that continent, but according to the United States Geological Survey, Department of the Interior, there are small glaciers on three of the highest mountains in Equatorial Africa—Mount Kilimanjara, 19,321 feet high; Mount Ruwenzori, 16,800 feet high; and Mount Kenya, about 17,007 feet high. On Kebo Peak, which is a part of Mount Kilimanjara, there is an ice cap 200 feet thick, which fills the ravines forming glaciers, several of which extend down to points 16,000 feet above sea level and one to 13,800 feet. Both Mount Ruwenzori and Mount Kenya are close to the equator, but their lowest glaciers extend down to points 12,700 and 14,460 feet, respectively, above sea level. A study of the moraines formed by these glaciers shows that during the Ice Age the glaciers were much larger than they are now.

WORK VS. LUCK

The scientist who transformed the three leaf clover into a four leaf variety didn't do it by luck. He did it by work.

The man who built the business that pays us our wages didn't build it by luck. He built it by work.

The house you live in wasn't built by luck, but by work.

The shoes on our feet, the clothes on our back, the hat on our head. Are they the product of luck.

The cereal and coffee on our breakfast table, the sugar, the plate and cup and spoon—Did they just happen onto our table by accident? Or did someone plan and work to bring them to our breakfast?

Earth, air, fire and water were the four natural gifts to man. Out of these four elements man has developed civilization. How did man accomplish this marvelous task?

Did he do it by shaking dice, or hunting four leaf clovers? Not much? He did it by his own skill and application.—work.

All human progress is the result of the inborn spirit of man to apply his head and hands to improving his own condition.

The secret of success is WORK.—American Educational Association.

FAIR IN AHOSKIE, N. C. LOOKS PROMISING

The Atlantic District Fair Association will hold its second annual fair October 24-27th. It is time for the officers and members of the association to make this fair second to none in the state. Realizing what this means, the officers of the association are putting forth their best and foremost efforts to make this desired accomplishment a reality.

Considering the shortness of our existence and experience in the fair world, our fair of last year compared favorably with any in the state. In fact, in some respects, it was in a class by itself. As this is a district fair consisting of six counties, we are depending this year as never before on the concentrated support of each and every county. As an appreciation of the counties' support, separate space will be allotted to each county in the exhibit building. Medals will be given to the county holding the highest number of first prizes.

The secretary is making encouraging reports to the executive board relative to the work being done by the committee of each county. This in itself is a concrete evidence of the new life, vigor and interest of our people and demonstrates as never before the usefulness of the fair as an institution of general uplift.

Our midway promises to be pregnant with first class amusements. Already, several high class attractions have been secured while negotiations are being made for carnivals and other attractive shows. The association will offer larger prizes than ever before which naturally guarantees good racers. Everything points to a greater fair year than ever before.

Begin now to prepare your exhibits. Anything that shows brain, skill, art, or science is wanted in our exhibit building. Premiums for superiority are offered for the same. It is the earnest desire of the entire association to have his or her talent on exhibition at the fair. This is our motto, why let it be yours? Make the Atlantic District Fair second to none in the state.

CAPITAL NOTES LAW OF SUPPLY AND DEMAND

Washington, Aug. 10 (Capital News Service).—Economists and statisticians in the Nation's Capital are pointing out an odd example of the working of the law of supply and demand. So vast are the forces involved in the operation of the law that it is not usually easy to see them except in the perspective of much elapsed time. But the result of the strikes has contracted this period so that the entire operation can be seen in a single example.

Lack of coal in this country has caused a sudden demand upon British coal mines, which in turn caused a sudden rush for ships to carry the coal to the United States. The immediate result has been an increase in ocean freight rates from England to the United States amounting to a hundred and fifty per cent, or from seven to seventeen shillings a ton.

A ship's journey is there and back. The usual amount of freight space available for the return journey has caused a great drop in freight rates for the transportation of grain from the United States to Europe which has been aided by the inability of American railroads to promise grain deliveries at shipping ports, due of course to the railroad strike. In England, much coal, a demand from America, and insufficient ships send freight rates up. In America, too many ships and a scarcity of cargoes send freight rates down from 14 cents a hundred pounds to 11 1-2, with the prospect of going to 10 cents, which figure is much below pre-war minimum.
