MODERN HOME AT MODERATE COST

Outward Appearance is Attractive and Pleasing.

3 CONVENIENT BEDROOMS

Home That Answers the Demands Where Means Are Moderate but Tastes Particular—Kitchen is a Step Saver.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 127 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

Often the builder is confronted with the demand that he is expected to build a home of ample accommodations for a medium sized family, that it shall be attractive and pleasing in appearance and yet its cost shall be moderate.

Now that may seem like quite a large order to fill. But there are such homes and we are pleased to suggest one of them. It is pleasingly attractive, there is enough room for the average family to dwell within with every comfort, and the cost will be within the range of the owner whose building budget is of modest size.

The large open porch with overhanging roof supported by special fitted columns and a touch of the pergola effect are strong factors in making the house home-like to look at. The French windows at one side and the large windows on the other side of the front exterior, nicely set off with an awning and a flower box, make a front that will capture and please the eye. The living room has the ever popular fireplace, an idea which we borrowed from the past, but which is an essential element in every modern home. And there is a bed closet in this room, so the three bedrooms have the added accommodations of an extra bed when necessity arises.

While the living room is only 14 by 17 feet it is connected with the fair sized dining room by glass doors so the rooms may be used in conjunction and answer the purpose of one large living room.

While compact, the three bedrooms are large enough for the use intended and are well located in relation to the bathroom.

There is a convenient back porch and the kitchen is designed on those compact lines which save steps and time for the busy housewife.

Note how well lighted all the rooms are. Besides the glass doors in the living room there are two small windows at either side of the spacious fireplace. In the dining room the architect has arranged three windows of such size and length that they admit an abundance of cheerful light. The kitchen has two windows and two of the bedrooms have two windows while the front bedroom has the added advantage of a third window.

While exact figures will have to be obtained from the local dealer, prices varying in different localities, it can be generally stated that this design can be built at moderate expense.

Laws of the Soul.

The intuition of the moral sentiment is an insight of the perfection of the laws of the soul. These laws execute themselves. They are out of time, out of space, and not subject to circumstance. Thus, in the soul of man there is a justice whose retributions are instant and entire. He who does a good deed is instantly enabled. He who does a mean deed is by the action itself contracted. He who puts off impurity thereby puts on purity. If a man is at heart just, then in so far as he God; the safety of God, the immortality of God, the majesty of God do enter into that man with justice. If a man dissemble, deceive, he deceives himself, and goes out of acquaintance with his own being. A man in the view of absolute goodness, adores, with total humanity. Every step so downward is a step upward. The man who renounces himself comes to himself.—Ralph W. Emerson.

Excitement Adds to Weight Strain.

To insure a margin of safety, a grandstand designed to accommodate 14,000 people weighing approximately 850 tons, must be strong enough to support a weight of at least 1,700 tons. The reason for this is that when people are excited and jump about they weigh twice as much as when sitting still. A man crouching adds about 65 per cent to his weight in suddenly straightening himself up; rising from a sitting position adds about 80 per cent, and it is possible, by rising with a sudden jerk, to momentarily add over 150 per cent of the strain of one's weight. As people on a grandstand witnessing games, or other exciting spectacles, cannot be relied upon to sit still, the stand must be prepared to bear double their weight, thus allowing every person to rise or sway in excitement without causing the structure to collapse.
