HERTFORD COUNTY HAS NO TUBERCULAR COWS

Out of a total of nine milch cows tested last week in the County for tuberculosis not one was found to have the disease. This isn't neces-sarily, though, a true index to the condition of all the cows in the County, for this ninety cows were above the average in the County (they were mostly the best milch cows), and we might find a condition nesday for Baltimore where he will very different from the one indicated above if we took the County clean as we made the tests.

The veterinarian making the tests says that, while you would not expect to find a very high per cent of animals among our native showing a T. B. reaction, yet undoubtedly there are some tuberculin ones and it is the humane and sensible thing to do, to take up the tests county-wide and get rid of all the ones infected. They are a source of infection for all the cattle and therefore to every person in the County who uses milk.
