At Old Chowan

Hearts turned again to Old Chowan on Home Coming day last week when the Alumnae and friends assembled to celebrate the 74th anniversary of the founding and to gain inspiration.

The inspiration of Miss McDowell's wonderful speech, the beautiful pageant and able address of the afternoon; the evidences of the earnest and conscientious effort of President and Mrs. Vann and their co-workers, furnished incentive for united effort, cooperation and loyalty on the part of all who desire the highest development of the institution.

Faculty Recital

A beautiful and fitting climax to the features of Founders' Day was the brilliant concert of the evening—the Faculty Recital given at 8:15 by Misses White, Norman, Lane, Latham and Knott whose renditions were a charming revelation of remarkable skill and artistry.

TARBORO TO ENTERTAIN VISITORS AT ITS FAIR

One Of Oldest And Best In State Will Open Gates On October 31

There is not going to be anything lacking when the gates to the Coastal Plains Fair grounds are opened on October 31, according to reports coming from the office of the Secretary. The fair at Tarboro is the oldest among the eastern Carolina group, and has been liberally patronized for many years.

Located in a district wherein there is an abundance of progressive planters, and in an agricultural section that leads the State in productiveness, the domestic exhibits on display generally are much better than those shown at other smaller fairs. There will be no exception this year; and in fact, both agricultural and livestock displays will be better this year than heretofore.

In addition to the big displays of farm and home products, the usual live, busy midway will be chock full of good shows. Free attractions include a daily program of fireworks.
