The public is invited.

Send the boll weevil to bed hungry. He stands less chance of waking up next spring. Plow up the cotton stalks.

RAISE MORE MILK COWS IS THE AIM

Every Farm Should Have One, And Provide Pastures And Good Fences

(BY C. R. HUDSON)

There is no problem before the American public of more importance than the one of properly feeding and nourishing its people. Many of us do not stop to realize that there are 6,000,000 children, or one out of every four in the United States, suffering from under-nourishment and that 350,000 of them die every year from no other cause than that of poor or deficient food. It is not so much a case of poverty as it is of ignorance and indifference. The food now given these children cost even more than proper food would cost, because we often do not consider the difference food that nourishes and food that merely fills.

There are 44,000 families without a cow. Shall the children of these families yet to come, be reared without that most vitalizing food which can be obtained only from the cow? We hope not. We believe that when our people are fully aware of the situation they will undertake to rapidly remedy the matter.

In changing these conditions, pastures are of first importance. We cannot properly grow and maintain milk cows economically without pastures. There is no legitimate excuse for not having pastures. Grass grows well when given proper attention.

Mr. F. P. Latham, a successful farmer of eastern Carolina grows excellent pastures. He states that because of our all-year grazing season and the great number of summer and winter grazing crops that we possess, there is no other state that offers better opportunities for livestock production than does North Carolina.

Farmers who are interested in this matter should consult their County Agent and procure his assistance.

DEATH OF MRS. ROXIE SEWELL

On Thursday morning, September the twenty-eighth, nineteen hundred and twenty-two, the beloved wife of the late Jessie Sewell departed this been a great sufferer for many months.

She lived a christian life, was a faithful member of Mount Tabor Baptist church and the W. M. U. Society. Surely the church and the W. M. U. Society have sustained a great loss.

Mrs. Sewell lived a life of service, doing everything she could for her neighbors in sickness and distress. The neighbors feel like the mother of the community has gone to rest.

She was full of good words and deeds. All who knew her liked her for the Christ-like spirit she exhibited. She was a devoted wife and mother.

While our hearts are saddened because of the death of Cousin Roxie, still we realize that our loss is her eternal gain. Her life was a blessing to me while here for she was faithful, gentle and true. No task was too great for those who were dear; unkindness of thought she never knew. So rest in peace dear faithful one From the cares and trials of life. At rest in your beautiful mansion; Free from all sorrows and strife.

MRS. E. P. BENTHALL.

HOW TO CONTROL THE COTTON BOLL WEEVIL

A very important practice in controlling the boll weevil is the plowing under of the cotton stalks before frost has forced the weevil into winter quarters. If you plow under the stalks while they are still green you cut off the weevil's food supply and cause many of them to starve to death that might live over the winter, otherwise.

After a killing frost comes, the weevils immediately go into winter quarters (usually in the surrounding woods) so there is little or nothing to be gained, so far as destroying the weevil is concerned, by plowing under the dead stalks. Of course if your cotton doesn't all open until after the frost you can't do this, but if it does open, strain a point to get it picked out and then stalks cut down and turned under. This practice will pay you even if your neighbors won't do it, although concerted action along this line is desirable. While you may not have found any weevils on your farm, you can be pretty sure you have some, for they are pretty well scattered over the county, and it will pay you to begin the practice of plowing under stalks this fall. H. L. MILLER.

"Three days make up our life—Yesterday, Tomorrow and Today. Yesterday is dead forever. Tomorrow's sun never rises—it is always Today. Do the work today. Start today and do the things you ought to do. You know what these things are. Nobody else on earth can tell you. Begin today."

HERTFORD WILL GET HARD SURFACE ROAD

"If I live, you Hertford County folks are going to get some hard surfaced roads. The state highway from the Roanoke River bridge to Aulander, and from Aulander, via Ahoskie, to Winton will be hard surface, nine feet wide, with gravel flanking either side." That is the word sent to an interested Ahoskie citizen by W. A. Hart of Tarboro, Highway Commissioner for the First district.

These are positive assurances Hertford will not be slighted in the distribution of road construction funds. According to Mr. Hart, there is not enough available to make the hard surface standard width, and the nine foot section has been decided upon in order that the total mileage may be built with available funds.

PLENTY OF SMOKE BUT LITTLE FIRE

When E. J. Gerock walked into his store Sunday morning he found it almost flooded with smoke. Sensing a fire, although there was no blaze in sight, he called a person standing on the street, and together they sought to discover the blaze. A careful but hurried search failed to reveal any signs of a fire except the smoke threat.

Going upstairs to the storeroom, they found that a hole had been burned in the floor of the toilet, and the ashes had dropped down on the tin ceiling below. There were no live sparks around, the fire having smoldered and gone out.

Some time Saturday night a lighted match had been thrown into a box and had ignited the sawdust. The box had burned, and had set fire to the floor beneath.

There had been no one in the store from the time it caught fire until Mr. Gerock incidentally walked in Sunday morning.

A donkey, a train and an open switch

A train once started for a distant city. At the same time, a donkey started.

The engine, used every ounce of steam, snorted off through the countryside, every valve open, every seam strained.

But in her madness of speed, the engine overlooked an open switch and the train was demolished. The donkey took his time and arrived at the distant city several hours later, and partook of a bag of oats.

Live high and spend all—and you'll strike an open switch some day. But save your energy and your substance and you'll get there—some time.
