

MRS. BICKETT TALKS ON MOTHERHOOD AT CHOWAN

One Hundred Guests Are Expected To Attend Thanksgiving Reception

Chowan College, Nov. 30.—On the afternoon of November 22, Chowan College was favored with a lecture by Mrs. T. W. Bickett on "Motherhood" and the work of the North Carolina Maternity Bureau. The speaker's well won reputation as a worker for social and civic betterment was gracefully referred to in a few words of introduction by Mrs. P. Sewell. To the audience composed of the student body and faculty of the College, as well as a large number of ladies of the town, Mrs. Bickett's sympathetic presentation of the claims of motherhood was very pleasing. Equally gratifying was the account which she gave of progress in North Carolina, due to intelligent legislation along lines most vital to the welfare of our state and nation.

After the lecture, an informal reception at which Mrs. Bickett was guest of honor, Mrs. Vann extended her hospitality to all present. In the genial light of tastefully decorated reception room the friends of the College were served delicious refreshments by the Seniors: Misses Elizabeth Turnley, Foyd Bridger, Genevieve Taylor, Marie Griffin, Emma Riddick Parker, Minnie Dunning and Bessie Jordan. By request Mrs. Lloyd Lawrence sang very feelingly a lullaby, and Misses Sarah Hughes White and Caroline Lane of the music department, discoursed beautiful music during the reception. It was a delightful occasion which gave an opportunity to partake of the social life of the school as well as meet one of the leading women of our state.

Silver Tea

On Monday afternoon the Freshman Class entertained the faculty and students of the College at a delightful silver tea. The halls on the first floor of the Administrative Building were artistically decorated with potted plants and candelabra. Misses Caldwell and Boothe, class advisors, presided at the tea table. A very entertaining program consisting of vocal and instrumental music, and readings by members of the Freshman class was rendered in a very pleasing manner, during the afternoon. Delightful refreshments were served.

Juniors Entertain

The Junior Class entertained a large number of students at a steak dinner on last Saturday evening in the college dining room.

Play Was A Success

The play "Daddy" presented by the Academy students on Tuesday evening was a great success. Misses Page Morehead and Jewell Askew who were the principals in the play won for themselves a large amount of praise.

Thanksgiving Reception

Great plans are being made for the annual reception given on Thanksgiving by the Y. W. A. One hundred or more guests are expected to be present to enjoy the hospitality of the Y. W. A.

viceable and award her the prize.

Another heroine whose brave deed has sounded through the ages is that of Deborah, an important character in the Bible. God had said that during the war of the Israelites and Canaanites, a woman should have the honor of capturing Sisera, the great Canaanite leader. Deborah commanded Barak, the leader of the Israelite army, to gather an army to Mount Tabor. Sisera heard of this, and took a large force to put down the rebellion. Barak then boldly came down and marched towards the river Kishon. The battle was joined on the river banks, when almost immediately a violent storm came on driving rain and hail in the faces of the Canaanites. The narrative plainly says that the river took part in the battle, swelling and overflowing its banks, and washing away the bodies of the fleeing Canaanites. The wet banks made the dreaded chariots worse than useless. The rout and massacre were complete, and the long way was covered with dead bodies. This victory was won by Deborah and many songs of praise were made to her name.

Another step through the ages will bring us to the great heroine, Joan of Arc, the great heroine of France who won her fame by her bravery in war. Joan of Arc was born in Domremy, France, January the sixth, fourteen hundred and twelve. She lived the life of a peasant and until at seventeen, "voices" bade her don the armor of a man and save France. Joan obeyed the voices, and unlettered, untrained, led the French army to victories that ended the Hundred Years' War. Probably no figure in profane history so appeals to the imagination, so brings the heart to the throat, as does that of the Maid of Orleans. In no period of history were men and women more decadent than at this time. But Joan of Arc was virtuous, was honorable, was loyal, was pitiful, was deeply religious at a time when common customs were indecency and treachery. All that has been adored in womanhood since the world began, as the loveliest and the most to be cherished, she possessed. The supreme type of leadership that men always have striven for she achieved with no effort save that of sacrificing the quiet, pastoral life that she loved.

We know what she accomplished. We can not know what she thought of the bitter places in which her lives were laid. She died as heroically silent as she had lived. Although the people did not realize then that they had allowed a saint to be burned, they have since realized it and now are heaping her name with laurels and building monuments in her honor.

Another great heroine is the little martyr of the World War, Edith Cavell. This wonderful woman was an English nurse who did a great work in helping the afflicted on the firing line in Belgium. She was always very sympathetic and did everything within her power to aid stricken and needy soldiers. This good trait was what led to her martyrdom. The Prussians charged her with having helped hundreds of French, Belgium and English soldiers into the firing lines to aid the fighters, and also of aiding the soldiers who were left behind after a battle. In the eyes of the Germans these were high offenses and she was condemned to be shot at the dawn of one day after ten weeks of imprisonment. She confessed frankly everything she had done, and was bright and calm to the last. She had not expected that the trial should come to such an end, but when she learned her fate she showed no signs of fear and showed up bravely. To the British chaplain she made the statement that she would see him again. The chaplain then sang "Abide With Me," and Miss Cavell joined in and softly sang the last stanza. After the British chaplain was forced to leave the prison the German chaplain remained with her to the last. He said that: "She was bright and brave to the last. She professed her Christian faith and that she was glad to die for her country. She died like a heroine."

These instances show to the world the many types of heroines that the world has produced. The types that win their fame by going into war and fighting battles, and the types that quietly do for mankind a greater service than fighting battles. The world appreciates these heroines and has, though sometimes too late for these great persons to realize it, made them idols of many nations.

"Feeling Fine!"

"I was pale and thin, hardly able to go," says Mrs. Bessie Bearden, of Central, S. C. "I would suffer, when I stood on my feet, with bearing-down pains in my sides and the lower part of my body. I did not rest well and didn't want anything to eat. My color was bad and I felt miserable. A friend of mine told me of

CARDUI

and I then remembered my mother used to take it. After the first bottle I was better. I began to freshen up and I regained my strength and good, healthy color. I am feeling fine. I took twelve bottles (of Cardui) and haven't had a bit of trouble since."

Thousands of other women have had similar experiences in the use of Cardui, which has brought relief where other medicines had failed.

If you suffer from female ailments, take Cardui. It is a woman's medicine. It may be just what you need.
