A glutton for capital
FIVE-EIGHTHS of the world's current production of crude petroleum today lies in the United States. In this one industry is invested about eight billion dollars.
This figure is steadily growing. Ever increasing demands for gasoline and other products call for more wells, more lines, more refining plants, more marketing equipment. It is the tremendous volume of the business that makes it possible to sell the products cheaper here than anywhere else in the world, and yet out of the narrow margin of profit to provide for tomorrow's requirements.
