Ahoskie Lady Writes About Trip To Shrine Ceremonial

whom we had been sight-seeing and traveling, spent the night in Richmond. They generously offered us the use their room at Murphy's to freshen up. We were soon ready to dine and do a little more sight-seeing. (I dine at noon and sup at eventide even when I am in the city.)

We visited Valentine's museum and found there a fine collection of antiques, but the lady in charge seemed listless and volunteered no information. I think we had disturbed her siesta. But I am glad we went to Valentine's for I got a glimpse of my garden of dreams and it had been restored. As a romantic girl of 14 I had a room overlooking this garden. The fountain was dry, a marble lady had fallen from her pedestal and lay on her face. No sign of life appeared in the garden. But on moonlight nights I peopled it with objects of my fancy. Grave, bearded men in gray uniforms walked there with shy, sweet ladies, small of waist and bonafant of skirt and talked of the fortunes of war or sat on the stone seats and made love in the approved style of the sixties. The old college has been turned into an office building and the Baptists of Virginia now have a splendid plant at Westhampton which they call University of Richmond. Even my old lilac tree where I loved to study has been broken down. We make a hurried trip to the Confederate Museum and walk through Capitol Square. I wonder someone does not discover a way to keep Washington's and Dr. Hunter McGuire's monuments and the others that are made of bronze, free of mold and therefore unsightly. We say good-bye to the Tadlocks and at beautiful Union Station meet friends from Colerain. From here to Ahoskie the journey was without incident.

A. A. O. N. M. S. will forever spell charm and gaiety, fun, good nature, hospitality and fellowship to us. Everybody liked them but the Catholics and especially the Knights of Columbus did not like them. The Catholic hierarchy is a powerful religious-political organization that has long been concentrating its power at Washington. I do not believe that Catholicism will ever largely appeal to the Anglo-Saxon mind; but if, because of large immigrations from Catholic countries and others causes, the Catholic question should ever become an acute one in America, Protestantism would find a great ally in Free Masonry.

A visit to Washington convinces one of the greatness of our government. But that greatness rests upon the character of the people who support it. The hope of America is an educated democracy shot through with a dynamic righteousness says Dr. Q. C. Davis.

Perhaps the nation may turn to North Carolina, the home of the purest Anglo-Saxon blood, and the conservor of the ideals of our fathers for leadership in some crisis that may lie not so far ahead.

"The Star Spangled Banner,
Long may it wave,
O'er the home of the free and the land of the brave."
