

HIGHWAY ROUTE

with the commissioners in session at their regular meeting place, while a mass meeting was in progress at the courthouse. Commissioner Brett, who is working for the Vann corner, sought to have the town body meet jointly with the citizens at the courthouse. The latter meeting being presided over by attorney John E. Vann, and including several workers for the route via Vann's corner.

The proposal met with no favor among the other town authorities, and it was voted to remain at their headquarters and transact business as usual. The ordinary routine business was despatched, immediately following which Mr. Henry Taylor called for the thing that started the arguments.

Mayor Thad Eure, sensing what was in the air, quickly called upon a chairman pro tem, and read the petition which had been lodged with the highway authorities and which condemned the selection of the corner at the bank, at the same time asking for a route via Mr. Vann's home. A letter was also produced which had been written as a protest against the commissioners' action. The letter and petition had been turned over to the town board by the highway authorities, and Mr. Taylor and others knew it.

Reading into the letter a reflection upon his motives and purposes, Mayor Thad Eure defended the action of the commissioners and himself, and reviewed the propaganda that had since that time sought to undermine what had been officially done in the former town meeting. His talk was the signal for further heated discussions and in quick succession it came forth. Some spoke calmly and reasonably the thing out to suit themselves, while others "walked the dog." It was by far the warmest session of level-headed men seen in the county seat town for some time.

Attorneys Jno. E. Vann, W. Dare Boone, and Roswell C. Bridger spoke in behalf of the Vann corner, and Mr. Vann censured the commissioners for refusing to meet with the citizens at the courthouse. Attorney C. Wallace Jones, Mayor Eure and civilian Henry Taylor upheld the other side. Others also edged into the controversy, and arguments almost reached the stage of personal venom. In the meantime, many of those who had gone to the courthouse began to gather about the meeting place of the commissioners. Some stood in the doors, others crowded in the little room, and still others packed the sidewalks around the meeting place. Both men and women were there to speak up for their choice.

The whole affair, a kind of tempest in a teapot, resulted in nothing. The thing remained in status quo. Now, both sides are claiming a victory.

DON'T SCRUB SILVER USE MODERN METHODS

"If your silver is tarnished and you would like to clean it with very little effort, put into a bright clean aluminum pan and one teaspoonful of soda and one of salt," says Mrs. Jane S. McKinnon State Agent in the Home Demonstration Work. Let the water cover the silver and it will only a short while before it emerges bright and shining.

"When the tarnish is removed wash in hot soapy water and rub with a soft cloth. Silver is tarnished by the sulphur from gas and from coal or more frequently by certain foods which contain sulfur and is easily cleaned by this method."

The aluminum pan method of cleaning does not injure the silver in any way," states Mrs. McKinnon, "and is easier by far than the old way of scrubbing. When the silver is put into the pan it rests on an aluminum base which is to a certain extent like an electrode and action takes place between the metals and the chemicals used. When paste or powder is used for cleaning there is danger of the scratching of the silver but it gives a satiny finish that is very beautiful and frequently the housewife will use a soft clean cloth with a bit of the paste to produce this effect after she removes the tarnish with the aluminum pan process."

Ahooskie wants every tobacco farmer who produces any tobacco that is in reaching distance of this market to bring a load here next Thursday. And after you have once tasted of the prices paid and the welcome you will get, you'll keep right on bringing it to Ahooskie.
