

FASHIONS

Tailored Suits.
For the early brisk days of autumn, there is nothing quite so smart as the ever essential tailored suit, which has come into its own again, and women in this country do not have to be urged long to adopt this mode. The dominant note in the early Fall suits are the immaculate tailored lines of slenderized simplicity. Twills of various materials have been chosen for these suits, but some are made of the thinner pile fabrics, such as velveteen, velora, vellons and Duvet de Laine. These look like heavy velvet, so deep are their shadows and so lovely their surfaces. And however lovely the fabrics are this season, their tailoring makes them more lovely.

Some autumn suits are distinctly mannish in style and are amazingly popular. The box jacket with a hip length jacket in novelty cloths is liked among the youthful models. All the skirts are smart lap-over or sheath models, giving the long, svelts line desired for Fall. The smart, new three-quarter or knee length coat has apparently come to stay for the rest of the season. These are belted and unbelted effects. The unbelted ones give the straight line from shoulders to ankle without a break, without a vestige of a waist line, without a sign of a flare. Sleeves appear long, slim and straight.

The three piece suit still holds its place as a happy combination of street and dress style. With coat removed, seated at lunch or at the theatre, only the blouse shows. This can be as elaborate or simple as the occasion calls for. Women are loath to give up the becomingness and the charm of light materials near the face, and as collars have yet to make their appeal for afternoon dresses and formal occasions the costume suit with a part of the frock hidden is sure to be favored.

Many of the smartest tailleurs are designed to be worn with one's own furs. Others are lavishly fur trimmed, finding endless new effects in fur pockets and novel fur borders as well as in collars and cuffs.

Ruffs and Bows

When summer furs became the vogue, the saner women took a decided dislike to fur scarfs no matter what the season and having learned to do without them, they are loath to swathe their throats now in heavy fur. But the suit requires a finishing touch at that spot, and ruffs and bows are back. Pretty ruffs of pleated or gathered velvet are worn for early autumn street and afternoon occasions. They are silk lined and have a silk flower at the fastening, silk net, very full and crisp and a finishing knot of ribbon. Another good neck scarf is of marabout shown in straight-around collars and in boas of different lengths. Some are practical shoulder scarfs, long and wide in many beautiful shades. It is considered distinctly swaggar to wear a muffler or wool or silk with tailleur in mauve, gray, brown, black or white or in fancy Roman stripes.

Sportswear

Scotland asserts itself in sportswear. Bright plaids which claim origin from the Scottish clans are among the new autumn fashions. There is, also, the sport suit with that envied "English" air, fashioned from the softest English woolsens in new weaves. These tailored two piece sports suits are foremost favorites because of their all-around adaptability and general "every-hour" appropriateness. The appeal of these smart, simply styled suits lies in their happy versatility—they are equally trim for street wear, for business, and for week-end trips. Two piece models in stripes, plaids, and tweed mixtures offer a wide selection for smart serviceability. Fur embellishment abounds.

Then there are the tweed knicker suits, the kind the college girl will delight in. Fashioned of all wool tweed in warm shades of gray and brown, the coat is well tailored, with patch pockets and box pleat down the back. The wrap around skirt opens full length, revealing roomy, well cut knickerbockers so essential to the hiker's and golfer's wardrobe. Another model has a plain coat with a convertible collar and slit pockets. A narrow belt gives a smart finishing line. The coat is equally good-looking when worn with the swaggar knickers or the well fitting skirt.

Sweaters

One of the smartest sweater notes of the new season is the chappie coat style, that serves either as sweater or jacket, and comes in gayest designs. These are especially good looking because they are of the soft brushed yarns, with collars that fasten at the neck or turn down Tuxedo fashion. They fasten to the side with ornamental buttons and come in the effective combinations, camel and brown, navy an dsliver, black and white, all henna, gray and alpaca brown.
