(By PETER KEEGAN)

ONE OF THE BIG issues in the 1924 Presidential campaign will be Muscle Shoals, which just now is little more than a name to a majority of the voters. The fight will center about the disposition of the power project, owned by the Government at Muscle Shoals, and the effort of Henry Ford to lease the property for the manufacture of fertilizer will be discussed and argued at great length. After Congress failed to approve the sale of the property to Ford, Secretary of War, Weeks sold the biggest power plant at Muscle Shoals to the Alabama Power Company, a bitter rival of the Ford interests. Ford's friends say he was squeezed out to keep him from being a formidable candidate for President.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT in this column that Woodrow Wilson would like to take the stump in the forthcoming campaign has been followed by the statement in authoritative circles that Mr. Wilson's name might well be included among the Democratic Party's "receptive candidates" for the Presidency. It is the general opinion, however, that the former President would discourage any organized effort to make him the Democratic standard bearer again.

THUS FAR THE Democrats only have one announced candidate, so there is no internal warfare in the party, except over policies. The sole candidate to date is Senator Oscar W. Underwood of Alabama, and he is feeling his way carefully, being hesitant to commit himself on matters of policy until a clearer perspective can be obtained of next year's outlook. That former Secretary of the Treasury, William G. McAdoo will also be a candidate there is no doubt, but McAdoo is campaigning for the present without blaze of trumpets or beat of drums.

MAJOR ROY A. HAYES, the Federal Prohibition Commissioner, and police officials, of the District of Columbia, are engaging in a controversy over the enforcement of the Volstead Act in Washington. The District Commissioners, who are supreme in municipal affairs served notice on Hayes that they will withdraw the metropolitan police from prohibition enforcement duty unless the Federal government takes steps to improve the personnel of the enforcement officers on duty in the capital. It is a situation that is proving embarrassing to both sides and may require adjudication by the President, who is the real boss after all.

ABOUT HALF OF the members of the Senate have gone to Europe this summer to get first-hand information on economic and political conditions. The first guess would be that each would come back with a new plan for solving all the problems of the World, but such is not the case. Nearly all of the returning legislators inform me that their investigations have convinced them that there is virtually nothing that the United States can do just now except to sit on the side lines and watch the International poker game across the Atlantic. Incidentally, that is one of the cardinal points of this administration's foreign policy, too; to be ready to help when the opportunity arises, but not to rush the American people into new difficulties.

UNLESS MR. COOLIDGE uses his executive powers to revive the United States Grain Corporation, there is not likely to be any move of a spectacular character on the part of the Government in extending financial relief to the farmers. The President is dead set against a special session of Congress and has his administrative agencies engaged in a study of railroad freight rates and the tariff to see if some plan can't be worked out to alleviate the economic embarrassment arising from a crop surplus, especially wheat. If the grain corporation is put to work again it probably will buy about 200,000,000 bushels of wheat, either for export or to hold until the price goes up.
