FASHIONS By Lillian Meriwether

With the three piece suit dominating, the over blouse as distinguished from the tuck-in variety, assumes an important place in the season's mode adds to the charm and softens the winter costume. The shops are dis-playing a wide and diversified collection, embodying the new fall and winter lines. The autumn blouse bor-rows from fashion her richest colorings and her most exquisite fabrics. The vogue for velvet is found even in these, but of a soft quality, exquisitely graceful and light. For this garment velvets have been wov-en especially; chenille, broche and other cut velvets, and produced in smart colors.

Skirts

The seperate skirt plays no little part in woman's wardrobe of today. There are endless varieties from which to choose. Plaids are in the vogue and the fabrics pattern has in-spired the fashioning of each individ-ual skirt. No matter for what purpose you choose the skirt, there is a seperate model, for the business office, the shopping trip, or any occasion of sports wear, you will find them all beautifully tailored and finished. Fabrics include novelty boncles, overplaids, fancy stripes and camel's hair type. The fall mode for skirts reveals entirely new thoughts in pleatings, bindings and novel uses of two tone fabrics. For dress wear, are the silk and velvet skirts.

Blouses

The seperate skirt and the blouse are closely allied and should be in harmony with each other, instead of chosen on the hit and miss fashion of by-gone days. The manufacturers are aware of this and we have ad-vance information that the waist makers are evolving a complete costume which will carry out this idea of unanimity, and in the future season there will be no time lost nor effort wasted in hunting for the very blouse to complement the skirt or suit one has previously purchased. The manufac-turers will already have selected the right kind of combination for you! Of Broadcloth

A suit of simple material is given distinction by combining it with a tailored over blouse of English broadtailored over blouse of English broad-cloth, white particularly, with Derby Bab or Tuxedo collar, link cuffs and little pockets, and which can be wash-ed like any ordinary blouse, Radium silk is another fabric of the tailored overblouse in white, wood tones and

Of Crope De Chine

The French touch is given to the blouses of creps de chine. They are weighted with steel and cashmere beads sprinkled over their surfaces in beautiful designs, and at the scallop-ing that finishes their lower edge and are found in light, dark, brilliant or subdued coloring. Printed creps de chine over-blouses in quaint old-fashchine over-blouses in quaint old-tash-ioned fibral effects, in mellowed ta-pestry patterns and Chinese designs of gay colorings can be bought; they are of long sleeves with the wide round neck, the Jenny neck, it is called after its French Creator.

The Chinese mode is exemplified in the blouses fashioned in Mandarin, and leconstite effects in bright colors.

and lacquette effects in bright colors. Russie is represented in the long, flaring at the edge of its skirt, long dewing sleeves, a bloused-low-placed waistline, and elaborately embroidered or braided in brilliant colors. This of novelty.

Of Georgette
One can buy the lovely over-blouse

of printed georgette, traced in me-tallic threads with pleated ruffles on short sleeves and a charming shirred effect over lace lined in Georgette and trimmed with narrow folds of the same Georgette, Silk or satin, plans or pleated skirts are worn with these and they make a chaming afternoon or informal evening costume.

An afternoon frock displayed in a Fifth Avenue shop was a black velvet blouse, hip length, richly embroidered in gold thread.

OF Metal Cloth

An alluring over-blouse is one of metal cloth in gleamingly, beautiful, floral patterns, subtly woven with color and gold, fashioned with the delightful close neck that may be worn lightful close neck that may be worn both, opened and closed, a lovely com-plement to your three piece suit or separate skirt.

Overblouses of metal lace over the Georgette crepe add brilliance to the costume suit or separate skirt. Their gleaming lace is given durability by a lining of contrasting Georgette crepe. The combination of this blouse is silver over gray, silver over brown gold over navy, gray over Copenhagen, gold over cocoa and silver over black. These blouses are made with the wide round neck and short sleev-

Of Wool Jersey

The young girl will like the over-blouses of wool Jersey, with the trig, new planofore collar and the clever design embroidered cross-stitch-wise down the front in a contrasting shade down the front in a contrasting shade of heavy silk, or the plain blouse with collars and cuffs of two-toned lustrous satin. And for the very young miss there are the middles for the "gym" made of jean, with tight fitting cuffs, slope side, tie loop, sailor collar and inset pocket, worn with a pleated skirt.

The sport blouses are smart look-ing in cut, tailoring and finish, close-ly resembling custom-made apparel.

They are new and comfortable in the every detail, collars, shoulders, the sleaves, fullness and length. There are flannel ones suggesting the last word in tailored chic, a shirt featured in fine stripes and checks and plain white. There are alip-overs made of madras with V-necks and cleverly beaded insert; and madras riding shirts, looking swagger with their high, boyiah collars, just the thing for the gallop.
