PRESERVING MEAT ON THE FARM.

The old method of pickling meat in a strong salt-peter brine is still very generally used by farmers in putting up their annual supply of meat.

Of recent years manufacturing chemists have not been backward in offering to farmers and butchers various meat preservatives sold under trade and misleading names.

To make a good, mild and wholesome meat pickle take the following materials—for each 100 pounds of meat:

Common salt, 8 pounds; brown sugar, 3 pounds; cream of tartar, 2 ounces; water, 1 gallon.

First boil the water for 15 minutes and then stir in the salt, sugar and cream of tartar.

Next the meat is to be packed in a clean barrel. Place the largest pieces at the bottom.

Cover the barrel tightly and set away in a cool, dark, dry place.

After smoking until a light brown color is attained wrap each piece of meat in brown paper and enclose in bags made of unbleached muslin.

Benefits of Rural Libraries. In a recent interview Prof. C. W. Massey, county superintendent of Durham county said:

A few days ago we were visiting one of our rural schools and after the school had closed one of the pupils approached us and gave his individual order for one dozen books of his own selection.

We notice that the more our people read the greater the desire for good books among them and greater the desire for more and better educational facilities.

No part of the state appropriations for public schools or of the regular state and county school fund is in our opinion so wisely invested for the dissemination of general information among the masses of our people of all ages and for the cultivation of a sentiment for education and a desire for knowledge and for higher culture as the part invested in the establishment of rural libraries.
