Shop Talk. The Courier has purchased the material for the erection of a building in the rear of the present composing rooms near the court house. The addition will be completed by the middle of September. The addition will be used for our new newspaper press and folder and for the job press now in use in the job department and a new jobber and folder, the purchase of which is made necessary by the increased business of the job department.

After October 1st we will have for sale three engines, two gasoline and one kerosene. The gasoline engines are one and a half and two and a half horse power; the kerosene engine is a one horse power engine. All three of the engines are in good condition. The two gasoline engines are now in use and do good work. The kerosene engine was purchased with other machinery and for a lamp stand and at a great bargain.

All three engines will be sold at some price, if we can't get our price. We also will have for sale the Campbell press on which the Courier is now printed. It does as good work as any press. We sell it because it will not print an eight page paper the size to which we want to enlarge the Courier. It is the press on which the Courier is printed every week. Its capacity is twelve to fourteen hundred an hour. It turns off the Courier every week, now at the rate of 1000 an hour. It can be used as a hand press, and was run for years by hand since we purchased it.

The Boy Who is Faithful. It is all right to be smart, but it is all wrong to be smart in the wrong way. I have seen boys who think that they are smart in ordering others around and boasting of what they are able to do. If I had my way to be done I never hire a lad like that to do it.

It is true that some employers are in need of them; but there are thousands of positions where boys of ordinary ability are wanted. Boys that are to smart are often not desired, since they too often want to dictate and cannot be dictated to. They try to run the business, not to suit their employers, but to suit themselves.

There is a greater demand for faithful boys than for smart boys. There is nothing that a more appreciative employer in one under his faithfulness. A gentleman once asked a friend who had been a secretary what he thought of a much smaller salary. He replied that he could secure one for a less amount, but he could not get the work as this one. When I was gone, said the friend, "everything goes on just as if I were here." Now if the secretary had been smart, rather than faithful, his employer might not have said, "I can't leave him, for when I am gone he tries to run matters to suit himself, and it is not a partner that I want, but a secretary."

What one succeeds because of his smartness, he succeeds because of his faithfulness. And not at the boy's faithfulness alone does a would-be employer look for a boy who is an all-around moral boy. He knows that it is of no use to him one that smokes cigars and drinks wine. He knows that he will not employ a boy who is not a moral boy. He knows that he will not employ a boy who is not a moral boy. He knows that he will not employ a boy who is not a moral boy.

Thousands are sick every year with some form of Bowel Complaint. Thousands are cured by taking Dr. Seth Arnold's Balm. Warranted to give satisfaction by Standard Drug Company.

Mr. Ernest Hedding, who has been employed as driver for Mr. E. M. Pritchard, resigns his work this week and goes Monday to the eastern part of the State to visit his relatives. From there he enters the State University to graduate in pharmacy. Mr. Hedding is much liked here and he deserves it. He will be missed.

Mr. J. D. Currie, of Seaboard, Va., is here and will take the place of Mr. Hedding, Salisbury Post of Aug. 18th.
