It never rains but pours. Two of the Courier force are off on days of absence enforced by attacks of rheumatism, with a new press, new motor, and new folder and the measles "to boot", makes the lot of newspaper life in this office anything but a bed of roses, but the sun will shine, the birds will sing and the flowers bloom again and all will be happy and gay.

Every now and then some one calls at the old office where the Courier formerly was, in the two story building south of the Asheboro hotel. The Courier office plant and mechanical department occupies the brick building on Main street not more than fifty yards south of the Court house. The editor is at home about two thirds of his time and can be found when here in his office north of the Court house.

Mr J L Fields and son J Moody Fields came up from Asbury, Saturday afternoon reaching Asheboro at nearly night and were compelled to hire a team and drive through the country in the cold and damp night or go on Sunday morning. And all because we have neither afternoon train on the week days and no Sunday train. We have often wondered how it is that it is right for Greensboro and larger places and yet it is a crime to have Sunday trains to small places. The truth is that it is a miserable schedule Asheboro now has.

Obituary. It is with sad hearts we chronicle the untimely death of Robt L Kindler, son of J A Kindler, of Spero, N C. That awful and much dreaded disease, consumption, claimed him as its victim just as he was emerging into manhood. He died Jan 2, 1906, at the age of 17 yrs, 8 mos, and 29 das. He was always an unusually bright boy. Was a great favorite in school and always led his classes. He was very obedient and dutiful to his parents, and shone as a sunbeam in their home. One of his leading characteristics was his desire to do all that he could for the sick and suffering, often sitting up whole nights administering to the sick and expressing great sympathy for them. He was not natured like most boys, but from early boyhood he assumed a manly nature which was just maturing into noble, Christian manhood. All loved him, and that "Death loves a bright mark," was fully demonstrated in his case. The bereaved parents have our heartfelt sympathy, but we know that their loss is his eternal gain, for he died rejoicing in his Savior's love, and by telling those around him to meet him in Heaven.

A FRIEND. Miss Bettie Bowles, living six miles north of Germantown, was killed last Friday, by the wind blowing down an old kitchen in which she was. Her neck was broken and she died instantly.

SECOND-HAND UPRIGHTS. We have a splendid line of second-hand upright pianos which were taken as partial payment in exchange for the Artistic Stieff. All have been placed in first-class condition and range in price from $140.00 to $225.00. They are far superior to the new cheap pianos which ought to be designated as "Thump Boxes", that are sold for $175.00 to $300.00 by some retail dealers. Write at once and get first choice. We have applications from all over the country as soon as this notice is printed.
