The Junior Order United American Mechanics, over the entire Union are arousing themselves on the impending bill in Congress referring to the immigration laws. Last week we published a signed and sealed resolution from the Randleman Council, a duplicate of which has been adopted by the Aramachee Council, No. 72, at Worthville, and sent to the Senators and Congressmen from this district and a copy to the Courier for publication. Having previously published the resolution, THE COURIER takes this means of noting the action of our Aramachee friends assembled on the 10th inst.

D W Bulla, of Sophia, was here to-day.

In addition will sell a lot of new Buggies, Harness, Bridles, Halters, Collars and articles of like character.

Increased $400,000.

Salisbury, Jan. 17.—A telegram this afternoon from Winston, where the directors of the Wachovia Loan and Trust Company are holding a meeting, says the contemplated increase of $400,000 in the capital stock went through. The various branches of the Wachovia have been doing business on $600,000 and the supplement, which carries the amount to $1,000,000, is a tremendous thing.

Mr E A Wiles of Greensboro was here yesterday on business.

PEOPLE

In opening Bank Accounts desire and should have much information about banking but they are frequently reluctant about asking for it.

BANKS

Advantages of a Bank to the Community

Help for Manufacturers and Wage Earners

By collecting up the small amounts of capital, which otherwise would administer much less effectively to human needs, perform a most valuable service to commerce, for by accumulating these small amounts a great force is created, which is always necessary in production and exchange. In the community there are merchants, manufacturers and farmers, all of whom have some property. The bank helps these people in various ways.

At certain seasons of the year the merchant may find a large number of people owing him, and his stock of goods in need of replenishing. Instead of crowding his customers to pay, he accepts their notes for sixty or ninety days, takes these to the bank and guarantees their payment when due by endorsing them (writing his name across the back) and asks the bank to lend him the money that he needs for the purchase of the new goods. The bank having the money that depositors have left for safe keeping until they need it lends the merchant the money he requires charging him interest for its use.

The farmer is helped by the bank in the same way. In the spring he may need money to buy seeds or farming implements so he goes to the bank with his notes as security and gets the money needed for carrying on his business of farming. By the time his notes fall due he has harvested the crops and having sold a portion of same is ready to pay his notes, having, if prices are good made the interest on the money borrowed and a handsome profit besides.

At other seasons the manufacturer is in a similar condition to the merchant. He needs to purchase raw material from which to make the manufactured product, and also money to pay the wages of his employees, so the manufacturer goes to the bank and like the merchant giving the bank security borrows the needed funds for carrying on his business. By these means the bank helps every workman in the community. It puts money into circulation and makes it possible for labor to earn what it should. If it were not for the bank the manufacturer would be compelled to hire fewer men, being able to employ only such as he had money for the payment of their wages.
