Royal Baking Powder Absolutely Pure

Made from Pure Grape Cream of Tartar

In baking powder Royal is the standard, the powder of highest reputation; found by the United States Government tests of greatest strength and purity.

It renders the food more healthful and palatable and is most economical in practical use.

Housekeepers are sometimes importuned to buy alum powders because they are "cheap." Yet some of the cheapest made powders are sold to consumers at the highest price.

Housekeepers should stop and think. Is it not better to buy the Royal and take no chancesthe powder whose goodness and honesty are never questioned?

Is it economy to spoil your digestion by an alum-phosphate or other adultered powder to save a few pennies?

"Not worth His Sait."

The expression "not worth his sait" is generally taken to mean that the person of whom it is said is not worth the sait he eats on his food, but this, according to a local student of ancient history, is only partly correct. The expression originated among the Romans at a time when they were workers of the extensive salt mines. The laborers were paid in sait instead of money, and their pay was called their salarium. This, indeed, is the origin of the word salary as now applied to any regular pay. It came to be so applied in Rome even when money and not sait was the commodity used to make the payment with, and sometimes it meant money to buy sait with. In meant money to buy salt with. In those days salt was probably not so cheap and money certain'y not so dear as now, but the phrase has en-dured, and the expression "Not worth his salt" now means simply that a man is not worth his salary.
