The other day while his small boy was running this plow he left it going, and caught a rabbit which the dogs were chasing and went back to the team and found the plow doing its work perfectly. He further says that he stopped the plow and turned it over on its side and on starting the team the plow rose up and commenced plowing again in its proper place. This is no exaggerated tale but every farmer should have one and Mr Jordan will be pleased to show it to anyone who will call at his residence a short distance from town.

Easter in Europe.

In Munich and Vienna, the churches on Good Friday are the scene of a very striking picture of the burial of Christ. A figure of the Savior is carried in state around the church to the altar, where is a sepulcher, to which access, through an opening formed by artificial rocks, awaits it. The windows are darkened and, through the gloom, the eyes of thousands of awed worshipers are drawn to the tomb, where a solitary light illumines the white-palld figure of the crucified Christ. In some parts of Austria large processions parade the streets, headed by priests riding on horses and bearing banners, with an escort of white-robed choristers chanting hymns, and in Bavaria the peasants form processions, hundreds, sometimes thousands, strong, heralded by a man bearing a gigantic candle.

One of the most peculiar of these continental celebrations of Easter is that which for centuries has been practised by the monks of Roncevaux. As day breaks on the morning of Good Friday, a long procession of monks files out through the gateway of the abbey, each bearing on his back an enormous and heavy cross, by way of annual penance and in imitation of what they consider to have been one of the severest forms of Christ's physical suffering. Through hamlets and villages, this pathetic procession makes its way, in spite of the trembling knees and aching muscles, while the villagers, with bare and bowed heads, do homage to the cross. That their penance may lack nothing of severity, these monks strike into the country, choosing the steepest and roughest paths.—The April Metropolitan Magazine.

WHEN

a cheap piano goes through two hands it is bad enough, but when it goes through three hands, leaving a profit for each before arriving in your home it is a sorry affair sure enough. Piano buyers had better fight shy of cheap trash sold by most dealers, especially stencil dealers, who are ashamed of their "real name."

The house of Chas M Stieff not only does business under its own name but manufactures its own pianos. Here you can buy a piano for $450.00 whereas the same grade would sell thro' a retail dealer for $650.00.
