Milton.

These names, through their initials,
formed the first part of the acrostic, spelling plainly "McKim." A slight space appeared before the next list of names, which was:

Monart,

Mozart,
Euclid,
Acachylus, Dante.
The initials of these names brought out the second name of the firm, "Mead." Another slight space, and the following names appeared:

Here was the name "White" also engraved, the whole device bringing out the firm name of "McKim, Mead & White" in connection with the world's famed men. It was in 1890, just before the building was completed, that the discovery was made and published. The list of names was changed.

THE REAL LINCOLN.

He Was Not Homely, and He Was Not Slovenly in Dress.

He was Not Homely, and He was Not Slovenly in Dress.

For many years it has been the fashion to call Mr. Limooin homely. He was very tail and very thin. His eyes were deep sturken, his skin of a saflow pallor, his hair coarse, black and unruly. Yet he was neither ungraceful nor awkward bor ugly. His large features fitted his large frame, and his large hands and feet were but right on a body that measured six feet four linches. His was a sad and thoughtful face, and from boyhood to had carried a lead of cure. It is small wonder that when alone or absorbed in thought the face should take on deep lines, the eyes appear as if seeiag something beyond the riston of other men and the shoulders stoop as though they, too, were the rision of other men and the shoul-ders stoop as though they, too, were bearing a weight. But in a moment all would be changed. The deep eyes could flash or twinkle merrily with hu-mor or look out from under overhang-fing brows as they did upon the Five Points children in kindliest geutieness, So, too, in public speaking, when his tall body rose to its full height, with head thrown back and his face transfigured with the fire and carnestness of his thought, he would answer Dougother than a handsome mun.
