CHILD'S BODY CREMATED.

Cut Off In Hay Loft Of Burning Barn.

HORRIBLE ACCIDENT AT FRANKLINVILLE.

Unable to Rescue Child From Flames, Crowd Saw the Victim Perish—Had Been Playing With Matches.

News of the horrible death of the little five-year-old son of Mr. Calvin Kivett, of Franklinville, was received here last Thursday evening. The child's body was cremated in the father's barn, which was destroyed by fire Thursday afternoon.

The fire was supposed to have originated from matches which he had carried to the barn to play with.

A day or two before the child was caught with a hand full of matches, striking them to hear them "pop". They were taken from him and he was cautioned to let them alone.

On Thursday he secured more and went to the barn to play with them undisturbed. Secluding himself in the loft he began to strike the matches and the hay ignited. The burning hay rapidly cut off his way of escape and he perished. The barn was in full flame when the attention of passersby was attracted by the agonizing screams of the child.

The men who had gathered were helpless to rescue it from the torture. Through an opening in the side of the building they could see the cringing form, and hear the piercing cries of the victim. Strong men looked and turned away, in a burst of tears, as they realized the horror of the scene.

The charred remains were taken from the debris, and on Friday the funeral service was held. The grief-stricken parents have the sympathy of the entire county in their sad affliction.

WILL HARRIS KILLS THREE.

Notorious Mecklenburg Desperate on "the Rampage in Asheville."

A Charlotte desperado, for whom a large reward has been standing for some time, killed Ben Allison, a negro restaurant keeper in Asheville, on Tuesday night of this week. Another negro Tom Neal, was mortally wounded. Charles Blackstock and Will Bailey Asheville, policemen, were also shot to death by Harris. Both policemen were doing their best to capture him when they were shot. Another policeman, Capt. Page, received a bullet in the arm from Harris's rifle.

It seems that Harris came out of a negro house intoxicated, and declared openly that he was Will Harris, the Charlotte desperado. He served a term on the Mecklenburg chain gang for highway robbery; afterwards made deadly assault upon an old negro, was captured in the North, was again sent to the chain gang and again escaped. Later he was recaptured and sent to the penitentiary where he escaped within a few weeks. He has been outlawed and there is a five hundred dollar reward for him.

Notice to Teachers and School Committees.

If any teacher in the county has failed to secure a school or if any school has failed to secure a teacher, I hope those interested will write me at once. I have done my best to secure teachers for the schools and schools for the teachers, and will gladly continue to do my best.

There will be a meeting of the public school teachers at the Asheboro Graded School building on the first Saturday in December. All who attend this meeting will not be required to attend any other county teachers' meeting this winter. I hope to have North Carolina Day programmes ready for distribution at that time.

KING EDWARD'S COUNTRY.

Many Places of Interest in Quaint and Historic Quebec—The Citadel On Highest Point—Dufferin Terrace—Chateau Frontenac—Narrow Streets—Peculiar Conveyance, the Caleche.

About half of our party took a trip up the Saguenay river which is world famed for its scenery. The other half remained in Quebec for the three days and found that none too long to spend in the quaint old city which is full of historical points. It is doubtful if there is a city to be found in all America more interesting than Quebec. Here Jacques Cartier, the Columbus of the North landed three hundred and seventy years ago and claimed it for the king of France; then Champlain in 1608 and founded the first French colony, planting the fleur-de-lis of France on the heights creation after him, but the old Indian title "Kébec" has adhered to it and only two streets in the Lower Town now bear his name, one of which, very insignificant in appearance, ends in the Break Neck Stairs, which lead from Lower to Upper Quebec.

QUAINT AND CURIOUS QUEBEC—LOWER AND UPPER TOWN.

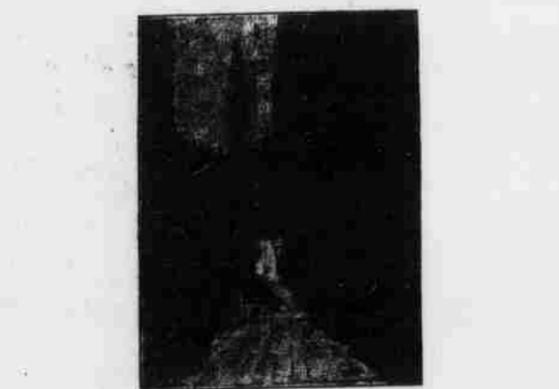

Quebec is quaint, curious and interesting from the fact that it is the mingling of the old and the new. The city is divided into the lower (old) and upper (new) towns. Lower Quebec cannot truthfully of the present city and became the first real founder. In 1759 after passing first into the hands of the French and then the British, Quebec with the whole of Canada passed into the hands of the British and remained so for more than a century and a third. Quebec still retains its French character; almost every one there speaks French and many cannot understand English. It is said that two thirds of the people now in Quebec are French. The French flag waves from the tops of many buildings and the French Canadian church flag is very conspicuous. When the country was ceded to England it was done by treaty and the right to retain the language and religion was guaranteed them, so notwithstanding the fact that Canada is under English rule, one is not there long before he sees that the country is saturated with French ideas and customs. In the legislative assemblies both French and English are heard; the former oftener than the latter. All public documents also are printed in both languages and in the courts pleas are made in either tongue, the lawyers as a rule using both with equal readiness. It is significant too that though the criminal law of Canada is English, and uniform all over the Dominion, the civil code of the Province of Quebec is still the old civil law of France.

Another interesting memorial of France is the perpetuation of French names, for instance, the rocky height just opposite Quebec is called Point Levis from a general of France, scarcely less illustrious than Montcalm. The Laval university, one of the most conspicuous buildings and institutions is named for Francois de Laval, the first Bishop of the Colony. It seems to me that it would have been a fitting tribute to Champlain to have called the place of his buildings, hotels, universities, residences, etc.

THE CITADEL AND THE PLAINS OF ABRAHAM.

The Citadel is located on the summit of the plateau on which Quebec is situated some three hundred feet above the St. Lawrence river. The view from here is one of the grandest I have ever seen. Below you are the two towns, Upper and Lower Quebec. At the foot is the St. Lawrence dotted with ships from all nations. The St. Charles river comes around and empties its waters into the St. Lawrence. Across it is Point Levis, a city fortified almost as well as Quebec, which is considered the strongest fortified city on the American continent. From the citadel projects the famous wall of old Quebec which at one time enveloped the city. The wall is now in a State of preservation, being maintained as a relic of the past. The total length of this wall is about three miles and it varies in height from the level of the ground, where the cliffs afford natural protection, to 10 or 12 feet and in thickness from 2 to 5 feet. We were shown over the grounds of the citadel, which comprises 16 acres, by a guide who came from England and who is now a member of the Canadian army. It might be of interest to say here that the last British soldier was removed from Canada last spring and the Dominion now maintains its own military force. This officer showed us around pointing out numerous relics, one of which was a small brass cannon captured at the battle of Bunker Hill. Back of the citadel are the Plains of Abraham, the battlefield on which Wolfe and Montcalm fell in 1759. General Wolfe fell dead on the field and Montcalm, the French general was mortally wounded, carried down into Quebec and died in a short time. A monument has been erected to the memory of Wolfe and further down one sees a handsome monument 65 feet in height erected to both Wolfe and Montcalm not only to the victor but to the vanquished. One passed away in triumph, the other in defeat. One knew that he had gained, the other knew he had lost, the key to Canada.

DUFFERIN TERRACE AND THE CHATEAU FRONTENAC.

Two of the places that visitors always expect to see when they go to Quebec are the Dufferin Terrace and the Chateau Frontenac. A wall coming down from the citadel extends along the top of a promontory to a point near the road way between Upper and Lower towns. Inside of this, extending inward from the top of the wall is a wide public promenade with handsome railings, known as Dufferin Terrace. The walk is made of plank and is 300 feet wide, 1800 feet long and 250 feet above the St. Lawrence. It is the only promenade in the city. Consequently every evening hundreds of people come here to pass the time. Bands play and people have a good time generally. The Champlain Monument is at one end of the Terrace. Just behind it is located the Chateau Frontenac, a magnificent hotel owned and operated by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company. No trip to Quebec is complete without a visit to the Chateau Frontenac and an evening on the famous Dufferin Terrace, which is the pride of all Quebec.

CHURCHES, MONUMENTS, GATES AND PLACES OF INTEREST.

One of the best ways to see Quebec is to drive over the city so a party of four of us got a carriage and asked for a driver who could speak English, and started out one afternoon. It is no trouble to get a conveyance for you see them standing around and the hackmen yell out "carriage" to you on almost every corner. The regular price is $1.00 per hour, this of course explains why so many are in the living against the pavement to check the vehicle. One of the first things in Quebec to attract the stranger's eye is the Caleche. It is a peculiar, two wheeled, one horse vehicle, has one seat and on the front of the dash is a seat for the driver. (See picture)

It is the Upper Town that most excites the interest and admiration of the traveler. There are the finest

WALKER WILL HANG

No Witness Provided for the Defence.

GRAHAM NEGRO TO DIE DECEMBER 6th.

Negro Charged With Shooting Col. L. Banks Holt Last Week Jury Out 35 Minutes.

The trial of Henry Walker, the Graham negro who last week shot and seriously injured Col. L. Banks Holt at his home, was convicted Saturday in Alamance Superior Court on the charge of burglary.

The jury was out just 35 minutes. Judge Moore sentenced the prisoner to hang Thursday, December 6th, just a month after the deed was committed.

The prisoner maintained his composure during the time the judge was talking. In fact, he has been very much composed throughout the trial—even staid in his indifference to the fate that he evidently knew was awaiting him. After the sentence he was returned to the jail.

WEST RAMSEUR.

Ramseur Furniture Co.' Building An Addition—Personals.

Mrs. C. A. Blair, and Mrs. Jno. Baldwin returned Sunday evening from Asheboro where they had been visiting relatives.

J. D. Dixon and family attended burial services of Mrs. Craven, Sunday evening at Holly Springs.

J. M. Brewer has leased the Vance Cox farm near town and will move his family there soon.

Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Forrester returned Sunday evening from Michfield, where they had been visiting relatives. Mr. Forrester reports that he had a fine time squirrel hunting on the mountain.

The old chathamites Democrats who now live in Ramseur are jubilant over the great Democratic victory in Chatham and are rejoicing that they were among the number who elected the good men of old Randolph.

The Ramseur Furniture Company is spreading out. The addition to their already large building will contain 13,040 more feet of floor space.

Raleigh Cagle, who recently purchased and interest in the Bean Mill is moving his family there. Mr. Cagle will be general manager of the mill. Mr. Pete Jones is moving in the Cagle residence.

Quite an amusing circumstance occurred at our election. A sympathizing Republican, who never leaves any political stones unturned. Taken the time and pains to go some distance, early election morn with horse and buggy to carry an aged and afflicted Republican, to vote which was very kind of him. But alas a good kind Democrat waited on the old gentleman, who voted the Democratic ticket, while his sympathizing friend was hitching his horse.

MRS. CURTIS LECTURES.

Large Crowds Attend, Three Meetings Held in Asheboro—Good Collections for the Cause of Temperance.

Mrs. Nannie Curtis delivered three interesting lectures in the Presbyterian church here—the first, Saturday night, another Sunday afternoon, and a third Sunday night. The house was well filled at each hour and the speaker held the attention of hearers as few lecturers can. As a speaker Mrs. Curtis has rare power, impressing her audiences with deep emotion and sympathy for the cause of temperance which she espouses, and as quickly relieves the intensity with a flight of humor, but seldom is the lesson intended lost.

She presents the evil of intemperance and morality in all its horror, and the effect of the work she is accomplishing in this tour of the state will be felt far into the future. Her argument is most convincing.

She has made many friends in Asheboro, both for herself and the cause she so ably defends. During her stay in Asheboro more than $90 was contributed to the work of temperance in the state, and a good contribution was made to carry on the work she is doing in traveling from place to place delivering these lectures.
