POETRY.

Where are they?

Where are they?

Where are they—the fond dreams of boyhood gushing
Trusting to-morrow, yet full of to-day,
As yet unfolding the fair system's truth,
Blossoming in hope's soft ray untempered as ray;
Wherein the glowing visions that arose
Before our eyes of the outgoing throbs of woe,—
Of misery, fantastic, unreal, unreal,
And all the wretches be that hope alone can weave,
Where are they?

Where are they?

Where are they—the resolves of high young men,
The resolutions made to be and do,
When weakness, difficulty laughed to scorn,
Made pause for future years we fondly drew;
The deep devotedness to love and truth,
The manly purpose and the sacred vow,
That clustered, big with promise, in our youth,
Like sparkling spring buds, blushing on the bough—
Where are they?

Where are they?

Another Humbug.—A fresh plan digger, translator, and prophet has arisen in the West. Whether he is of the Smith family the account says not, but certainly he is of the Joe Smith genus—only "a little more so." The case is this: a lot of brass plates, bearing marks of antiquity, have recently been brought to light in Burlington, Wisconsin.—It appears that a certain man, who has for some time past believed himself inspired, had it revealed to him that by digging under a certain tree he would find a vessel containing plates with inscriptions relating to the aborigines of the country. He accordingly selected three of his neighbors to dig to the appointed place, who, (as they affirm,) after carefully examining the ground to be sure that it had not been disturbed, dug to the depth of several feet, and found at last the said vessel, which, after being exposed to the air, crumbled to pieces, exposing three plates of brass, covered with characters, of the meaning of which they were entirely ignorant, but which the prophet has since translated. The language from the translation purports to be that of a king or chief describing the destruction of his whole people and the places where they perished. Several persons have been to see the prophet, and many of them after seeing the plates believe them genuine. Whether this will translate itself into Mormonism, or become the basis of a new sect, is a matter of speculation. In either case it will find adherents. The world is full of dupes, and as it purports to be the work of Divine revelation, and is backed by the testimony of three honest men, it stands a good chance of being successful.—Tenn Sun.

Wash for the Hair.—The American Farmer says a 1-4 oz oil of bergamot put in a quart of unrefined N. E. rum, well shaken together in a glass vessel, and applied twice a day, is one of the best washes ever applied to the human hair, and prevents its falling out.

We firmly disbelieve in farmers that will not improve—in farms that grow poorer every year—starving cattle—farmer's boys turning into clerks and merchants—farmer's daughters unwilling to work, and in all farmers who are ashamed of their vocation.

Blind Bridles.—Why are blinders injurious to the horse? Because they gather dirt and heat round the eyes. Dirt irritates the eye, and heat produces inflammation. Eyes were placed in each corner of the head that the horse might have advantage of looking in different directions. Men, in the abundance of their imaginary wisdom, concluded the horse had too much sight and they wished to curtail it; hence the origin of blinded bridles. These increase the evil, that the horse is constantly compelled to strain them to see his way. This over exertion soon brings on disease.

Six different courts have been sworn by as many coroners since the commencement of the present year.

Industry is the boast of America—the rock of Republicanism—the soul of intelligence and religion.

Last week part of a set of screws, a dray and a load fifty-hundred gross weight, of pig metal from the wharf at Lawrence's foundry, in Pittsburg. The wharf is rather steep, the horse restive, and following for a scramble? The load was five thousand nine hundred and fifty pounds.

Ninety-two thousand tons of ice have been exported from Boston during the last four months.

If a yellow candle be placed in a gun and shot at a board one inch in thickness, it will go through without so jarring or concussing the slightest injury; and if a wooden ball be fired into the water, it will not rebound, but be flattened the same as if fired against a solid substance. A musket ball may be fired through a pane of glass, making a hole the size of the ball without cracking the glass; and if the glass be concussed by a thread, it will make no difference, and the thread will not even vibrate.

The papers give the particulars of a curious termination to a will in the branch of marriage processes of Copenhagen. A girl obtained, as a verdict against her seducer, that he should either marry her, or pay 2,000 rix dollars which was confirmed by a court of appeals, but he refused to do either. She put the decree in the hands of the Kongsfoged, an officer appointed to enforce the judgment of the civil courts, and that functionary went early the next morning with a file of soldiers and escorted the renowned lover to the church, where the couple were to be married, were there ceremonies read the decree, ordered the priest to perform the marriage, which he did, the bridegroom pronouncing a decided refusal, but the priest only replied that the decree was valid, and that if he refused to perform the ceremony he would be imprisoned. The bride and bridegroom were then married, and the priest at the altar. The bridegroom read the decree, ordered the priest to perform the marriage, which he did, the bridegroom pronouncing a decided refusal, but the priest only replied that the decree was valid, and that if he refused to perform the ceremony he would be imprisoned. The bride and bridegroom were then married, and the priest at the altar.

Polka Fashions—Polka Music, and Polka Engraving.

The Polka Dance and Portraits of Philadelphia Belles.

In the November number of GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK, we shall present to our Subscribers Eight Figures of Fashions—more than has ever been given by any other publication. The Dresses are copied by Madame Duchet, from the Depots of our most fashionable modistes, and they may be relied on as those that are to be worn at Evening Parties this winter. The female faces are portraits, taken from Daguerreotype likenesses, of some of our most fashionable belles. They will be readily recognised by their acquaintances. This, in future, will be one of the features of Godey's Fashion Plates. The gentlemen's dresses are from designs by Carpenter, and are of the fashion of the day.

In addition to the above, we will give the Cloak Fashions for winter wear—also, Winter Bonnets.—These will be in advance of all contemporaries. Our Fashions are expressed, after the first proofs are taken, and sent to England to be forwarded to us by the Boston Steamers. The remainder of the edition is then printed and colored for the Paris market, which gives us an opportunity of issuing at the same time as those of Paris, while other publications have to wait until they are published in Paris, which is precisely one month after our proof has been sent to us, making our plate Thirty days in advance o all others.

It is always necessary to modify the French fashions, to suit the taste of our American Belles.

We receive from the following publications—Le Follet, Les Modes Parisiennes, Le Monitur Du La Mode, Le Bon Ton, Le Lion, Le Carrier.

NO OTHER PUBLICATION HAS THIS ARRANGEMENT.

The November number will also contain a favorite Polka Waltz and a Comic Polka Engraving.

TWO STEEL ENGRVINGS will also be published in the November No.

A rare chance for a beautiful engraving—monument to Sir Walter Scott.

A beautiful Line Engraving, 31 by 22 inches, engraved by A. L. Dick, of New York, and published at $2 will be given as a premium to any new or old subscribers, who will pay $3 per annum, in advance for GODEY'S MAGAZINE AND LADY'S BOOK.

Office, No. 101 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

 It is too large and valuable to be transmitted per mail, but a receipt will be given with an obligation to deliver a copy of the print to any person producing said receipt.
