On motion of Edward L. Winslow, Esq., a Committee of nine was appointed from each Congressional District, for the purpose of reporting for the consideration of the Convention for the nomination of the Governor. The Committee was composed by the Delegates from each District, and was composed of the following gentlemen, viz: H. Fran... N. Barden, John Kelly, J. McLeod, H. W. Miller, Thos. G. Haughton, R. B. Gi... ...ne, F. H. Hyatt, R. B. Smith.

The Convention then adjourned until 6 o'clock, P. M.

Monday Afternoon, 5 o'clock.

The Convention reassembled, when Mr. Boyden, Chairman of the Committee of nine, asked leave for further time to report, which was granted.

Mr. Francis, from the Western Reserve, gave rose and said, that it was usual in Conventions of this kind, to refer that business of the Gubernatorial Candidate to a Committee, to avoid conflicting claims of friends, and difference of opinion. But as well satisfied am I, said Mr. F., that there is but one opinion in this body, touching the soundness of the Whigs, that I venture to waive a reference of this subject to a Committee, and ask leave to submit the following resolutions, viz:

Resolved, That this Convention has full confidence in the unswerving, ardent, and devoted patriotism of WM. A. GRAHAM, the present Governor of our State, and that the faithfulness and impartiality with which he has performed the duties of the high station which he holds, he is entitled to the gratitude, and should receive the support of the people of North Carolina, at the ensuing election; and that, entertaining as we do, admiration for the services he has exhibited, in the fulfilment of the duties of every public station with which he has been entrusted by the people of his native State, we do not hesitate to declare our belief, that his re-election will advance the best interests of North Carolina.

Therefore, be it resolved, gentlemen, That the Hon. WILLIAM A. GRAHAM be, and he hereby nominated as a candidate for Governor of North Carolina, for re election; and that we recommend him to the support of that people he has for years so faithfully served.

Resolved, That the President of this Convention appoint a Committee of five, to communicate the above resolution to His Excellency Governor Graham, and earnestly urge his acceptance of the nomination therein made; and that they report to this Convention as soon as convenient, the Governor's reply.

The resolutions were received with deafening applause. When it subsided, Mr. Francis rose and delivered a speech, in his own peculiar and racy style, in which he scattered to the winds all idea of Reflection against Gov. Graham in the mountains, and pledged that the west would do her duty—her whole duty. His remarks were received with the greatest enthusiasm, and during a portion of them, when he assured the Convention what might be expected from the mountains next August, the applause was tremendous.

When he concluded, the resolutions were adopted by one long, loud, unanimous Aye, and the following gentlemen to be appointed a Committee to wait on His Excellency, Gov. Graham, with a copy of the resolutions, and earnestly urge his acceptance of the nomination tendered him, viz: Edward Stanly, M. Francis, William L. Long, James R. Dodge, John Kerr. After a short interval, Mr. Stanly reported, that Governor Graham would appear in proper person, in a few moments, and respond to the resolutions of the Convention.

Accordingly, in a short time, the Governor entered the Hall, and never have we seen any man greeted by such marked demonstrations of popular attachment. It was some minutes before silence was sufficiently restored to enable the Governor to address the Convention. Sensibly affected by the enthusiasm and confidence given him, he proceeded to respond to the nomination which had been tendered, in a brief, but most eloquent and impressive speech. Without alliteration, he promptly accepted the nomination, declared his readiness again to represent the Whigs as their standard bearer, in the coming August. And no one thing was there in his whole address, when looked upon his fine intellectual face, and heard its words of truth and candor, more evident to us, than a calm reliance on the integrity and uprightness of his character—those attributes of such peculiar value to those in public life, and so indispensable to a man who has the confidence of a free people.

[illegible] Democracy and his friends—[illegible] the Convention, [illegible] with such [illegible] William A. Graham, before such a people as North Carolina can boast of, it [illegible] possible.

When he concluded, three cheers for Governor Graham were proposed, and under was presented, from Edward Stanly, who called on all parts of the House, for a speech—He was called and when, on the part they, he [illegible] such speech as this meeting [illegible] such occasion, he proved himself a [illegible] without a rival. We [illegible] and the [illegible] of the [illegible] and [illegible] of John Stanly. We [illegible] with the delightful eagerness with which his auditors hung upon the lips of this [illegible] and eloquent son of North Carolina, as the rich tones of eloquence rolled from his tongue; and we are sure we do his modesty no injustice in saying, that his unanimous election on shoulders which were [illegible] Edward Stanly satisfies nothing which he does not admire. His speech is music, and seemed to Whig ears at least, to be the well-toned echoes of those spirit stirring bugle notes which filled the air of 1840, and charmed us on to victory. Nobly did this gallant spirit act his part in that glorious strife, and nobly did he bear himself on this great occasion. His high souled courtesy charmed even his foes. He said he had felt and expressed, in his young days, some bitterness towards his political adversaries, but when all he had, had been long ago spent. He had done them wrong as far as North Carolina was concerned. Almost his first acquaintance with Democracy was of another sphere, where Democracy and Locofocoism were synonymous. Rather, Locofocoism there was progressive Democracy "full blown." The Democracy of North Carolina was merely progressive, and he here it shall have attained full blown honors, he fervently prayed that it might traverse a night and a blast, that should crush it beyond resuscitation. We must only in a small specimen of Mr. Stanly's speech, some what in the style of his address manner of sending full blown Locofocos. It was somewhat in this wise: "My fellow citizens, the Democratic party of North Carolina, from the place which he has so well and so worthily filled? What has he done? Of what disqualifying act has he been guilty? Not a word has been said by his adversaries, even in their Convention, against his administration, not a whisper even is heard impugning his integrity, his official endowments, but against here for the land of his birth, or contempt is not of his administration. But these opponents hope to succeed in their unprincipled contest? In 1839, they placed in the field a man of talents—well and favorably known in every portion of the State—to oppose our own noble-hearted Morehead. After a thorough canvass, he was found in a minority of about 6,000 votes. In 1842, they selected to oppose the incumbent, a gentleman distinguished for his great powers of imagination, and for his flowery rhetorical, and he was informed by a majority of some 7,000 of those "sheep stealing Whigs," that he could not be allowed to be organize and convene himself" into the Gubernatorial chair. In 1844, they nominated one of the purest and best men he ever knew. Although a democrat, he was a gentleman of fine taste, of most glorious impulses, and of great personal popularity—a gentleman with whom, he took pride in saying, his relations were very kind, for he was his [illegible] and [illegible] then, the party was beaten by over 2,000 votes. They now nominate Green W. Caldwell, who will hardly be green enough to relinquish one of the best offices in the State, to take his chance for a seat in that Chair which is now well filled by a much abler man.

Tuesday Morning.

The Convention met. Mr. Boyden, from the Committee of nine, on whom devolved the duty of preparing resolutions for the consideration of the meeting, reported the following:

Resolved, That we adhere to the Whig doctrine, that the Revenue for the support of the General Government should be raised by a Tariff of duties upon imports, rather than by the imposition of direct taxes upon the people; and in laying such Tariff, Congress should afford incidental protection to Commerce, Agriculture and Manufactures.

Resolved, That the Whigs of North Carolina are most decidedly opposed to that scheme of Finance, commonly called the Sub Treasury, which has been so repeatedly and so signally rejected by the people of the United States, and which the present Administration is again endeavoring to force upon us.

Resolved, That we are in favor of an equitable distribution of the Proceeds of the sales of the public lands among the several States of the Union.

Resolved, That we believe that the United States of America have the better right to Oregon—that being fully sensible of the awful consequences to both Nations which must inevitably result from an appeal to Arms, we most ardently desire that this perplexing question may be settled by peaceful negotiation; but should the course of England drive our country into a War for the maintenance of our just rights, we, and all honest men, the Whigs of North Carolina, as in the days of the Revolution, will be found to a man, battling with their might in their country's cause.

Resolved, That Thomas L. Clingman, Rufus Reid, Nicholas L. Williams, John G. Taylor, Alfred Hargrave, John M. Morehead, D. B. Baker, Alexander Elliott, John B. Kelly, J. Collins, Edward Stanly, L. Thompson, R. T. Paine, Hugh Waddell, W. B. Wadsworth, S. F. Patterson, Kenneth Rayner, R. Hines, W. R. Gales, G. E. Badger, H. W. Miller, A. Jones, C. Manly, J. H. Bryan, T. J. Lemay, G. J. McRee, R. Gorrell, F. J. Hill, H. W. Husted, R. J. Hale, M. Francis, N. Boyden, J. Kerr, J. M. Leach, J. G. McDougald, R. B. Gilliam, T. H. Hawks, and S. B. Smith, be appointed by this Convention, a Central Whig Committee, to watch over the interests of the Whig party in this State, and to promote the re-election of the present able incumbent of the Gubernatorial chair, by all proper and honorable means, and that any five members of this Committee shall constitute a quorum to transact business.

Mr. Boyden, in submitting these resolutions to the Convention, advocated their passage in a speech which is sufficiently characterized in saying that it was worthy of his fame as a lawyer, and worthy of his former efforts in such warp of our Capitol. Mr. Boyden is a favorite with the Whigs, and that the Democrats do not love him better, is rather complimentary to [illegible] [illegible] as it [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]
