South draw near together in close fellowship?

Now that a common danger threatens them, will not the voice of faction be hushed within their borders, and Whigs, Democrats, and Americans all unite to form one party -the party of the South and the Constitution ?

Let us have this "consummation so deroutly to be wished," and the Southern States shall become strong. Then, like the barons of England in similar circumstances, shall they be able to demand their rights under the magna charta of the land, or, failing to secure these, to dissolve their connexion with a hostile and lawless section. Glorious, indeed, according to our view, would be the results of Southern Union. Let this measure but be perfected, and we will have attained, politically, the "one thing needful." Strength and confidence shall then succeed to doubt and weakness. and we of the South be able to "go forth to meet the shadowy future without fear and with a manly heart."-[Columbia Carolinian.

THE UNION.

The message of Governor Herbert, of Louisiana, relating to federal relations, concludes as follows:

The wild spirit of fanaticism which has, for many years, disturbed the repose of the country, has steadily increased in power and influence. It controls the councils of several States, nullifies the laws of Congress enacted for the protection of our property, and resists the execution of them even to the shedding of blood. It has grown so powerful that it now aspires to control the Federal Legislature. The fact can no longer be concealed, however much it may be regretted. The slaveholding States are warned in time: they should be prepared for the issue. If it must come, the sooner the better. The time for concession on our

POLITICAL.

THE PROGRESS OF ABOLITIONISM.

At this time, when we have but recently been informed how our friends, and the friends of the Constitution, have been stricken down in the fight by an unscrupulous majority, and how a party, avowedly hostile to us and our institutions, has finally triumphed in the popular branch of Congress, well may we recur to the rise and progress of that sentiment which now controls a high department of our Government. and threatens the peace of an entire section of the country.

disturbing the existing relations between its two races. Before that time, in consequence of the fanatical tendency of the Northern mind, there had sprung up a feeling of hostility to African slavery, but this did not exhibit itself in action until a later period. Finally, however, Abolition societies were organized, Abolition presses established, and Abolition lecturers sent forth to fan the rising flame of fanaticism. Then began that warfare on our section which is still continued. Next came petitions to Congress from the North to abolish slavery in the District of Columbia, and to prohibit the "internal slave trade" between the States. The petitions having been received. the work of agitation was commenced in earnest, and the band of fanatics grew gradually stronger and stronger. We next find them controlling several of the Northern Legislatures, and bringing about the abrogation, in effect, of that clause of the Constitution which provides for the delivery of fugitive slaves. Next they call upon Congress to abolish slavery in all places where that body has exclusive power of legislation. Then followed petitions and audacious resolutions of popular assemblages as well as egislative bodies to exclude the Southern members of the Confederacy from newly acquired territory, and to prevent the admission of any more slave States in the Union.

part and compromises has past. If the Union cannot be maintained upon the just and wholesome principles of the constitution, concessions and compromises will only retard its dissolution, not save it. They have had, thus far, no other result than to encourage attack and to increase the numbers of abolitionists. It would, however, be premature to suggest practical measures of resistance or retaliation. The

THE GOVERNOR OF MISSISSIPPI

ON SLAVERY AND KANSAS. Gov. McRea, of Mississsppi, in his Message to the Legislature of that State, now in session, speaks in plain terms his opinions on the subject of slavery. He sends to the Legislature the resolutions received from the Legislatures of Maine, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Michigan and Pennsylvania, and says:

I therefore recommend to the Legislature, in response to the resolutions of Maine, to return to her resolutions unanimously reaffirming the position of Mississippi, with a calm, temperate and dignified exposition of our rights, and our determination to maintain them at all hazards. If, then, Maine and our Northern sisters shall make, the issue of the Union with us upon the Constitution, the responsibility will be with them and the right with us, whatever may be the result. The difficulties in the Territory of Kansas have produced much excitement in the country, and awakened a feeling of deep interest among the people of the Southern States.
