-----A MIRACLE .- The well known French missionary, Father Bridaine, was always poor, for the simple reason that he gave away every thing he had. One evening he asked for a night's lodging of the curate of they attack them at all, literally like thieves a villege through which he passed, and the in the night, and then flee away as swiftly worthy man, having only one bed, shared as their mountain deer. of Russia she may marry again, for the banishment of her husband cancels the marriage bond as completely as death; but, if her prayer be granted. Government pays her expenses and she assumes the convict dress, though not the fetters. The examination past, the exiles are led to a third court, where fetters are placed upon the whole band. This is a most cruel and brutal affair. The fetters consist of a couple of heavy iron rings, one for each ankle, united by a chain, not adapted to the size of the person and the length of stride, but of one unvarying length, about two feet. This is connected, by means of links, from four to five inches long, with another chain fastened around the wrist. The poors round the ankles are not fastened by padlock, so as to be removed at night, but are riveted by the executioner, who drives an iron bolt through the rings, and by strong and careless hammering, (for he often misses the mark and strikes the flesh.) flattens the bolt at both ends, in such a way that removal is impossible except by means of the file; and with these chains the poor, weary, foot-sore wreiches are to walk every step of a journey which takes them only a few days short of six months. Meanwhile a sergeant stands by who must answer for their security with his own life. as he takes charge of them during their pilgrimage, and he sees them properly secured and fastened together in fours by their wrists.

This ceremony over, the gates are thrown open and the world ceases to exist for them. It is surprising to witness the calm bearing, the sad but resigned looks of that melancholy assemblage. Hope is now dead ; and in its place a dim yague glimmer appear in the distance of life, to which they look, perhaps with a more dreamy curiosity, than with any active feeling of terror or despair. The gates are thrown open, the exiles are handed over to a strong guard, employed exclusively on this duty, and each soldier loads his gun in their presence; there is also a mounted escort, with spears, the commander of which carries a long whip to lash the cavalcade into order; and then they move on the males first then the carts, and lastly the females. Persons of rank are not treated otherwise than the lowest serf, noblemen being comcelled to march the dreary journey on foot and as heavily chained as the vilest fellon. Those destined for the mines are shut out even from the light of heaven, they not only lose rank and riches, but by a refinement of cruelty, are deprived even of their names and a number given them instead, by which the driver of each band calls when he has need to addressed them.
