LETTER FROM GEN. H. A. WISE TO GENERAL GRANT.

Our readers will remember that General Wise has just arrived from the north bringing with recently made application to General Terry for him twenty white laborers, whom he meditates for specified reasons.

Under date of September 1st, General Wise has written a letter to General Grant, forwardextracts. He replies in succession to the points that he never "abandoned his home" except in going to camp to defend it against invasion, with the full determation to return to it as soon as the chances of war should' permit, he says, "I found no new home for my family; they were simply refugees from the old." He then writes as follows :

"If General Terry was governed by carnest and honest convictions of duty, of right and authority in all he did-so was I. If he was a patriot-so was I. If he gave proof of his de-votion-so did I. If he thought he had the shield of constitutional law and political sovereignty to protect him against the charge of rebellion and treason -- so I thought I had. If he loved and cherished the Union of these States, us that so many of our best citizens should leave I loved and cherished it so cordially that I never us for homes in other portions of the Union, from choice would have seceded from it, but yet, if they will go, we are always happy to hear prepared to fight 'in the Union;' and if he wonders how I now can truly declare these sentiments, after voting for secession and taking up ly left us is D. So far from my being opposed to the name "freedmen," as indicating the condition of slaves freed by the war, the chief consolation I have in the result of the war is that slavery is forever abolished, that not only the slaves are in fact, at least freed from bondage, but that I am freed from them. Long before the war indeed, I had in the business for a number of years, and he is so definitely made up my mind actively to advocate emancipation throughout the South. I had determined, if I could help it, my descendants should never be subject to the humiliation I have been subject to by the weakness, if not the wickedness, of slavery; and while I cannot recognize as lawful and humane the violent and shocking mode in which it has been abolished, yet I accept the fact most heartily as an accomplished one, and am determined not only to abide by it and acquiesce in it, but to strive by all the means in my power to make it beneficent to both races and a blessing especially to our country. I unfeignedly rejoice at the fact, and am reconciled to many of the worst calamities of the war, because I am now convinced that the war was a special providence of God, unavoidable by the nations at either extreme, to tear loose from us a black idol from which we could never have been separated by any other means than those of fire and blood, sword and sacrifice.'

EMIGRATION TO THE SOUTH.

FOURTEENTH VOLUME----NUMBER 684.

We are not among those who would discourage emigration of Northern citizens or foreighers to the South. So far from if, we believe every Southern man who looks to the future welfare of the South, ought to promote suitable emigration in every possible way.

Lands are rich and abundant. Our resources would profitably employ a population of the right kind, one hundred fold greater than it is at present. It is true we do not need men of merely speculativs habits-more seekers of fortunes, to stay awhile and then leave us, but we need men of means, of enterprise, working men, who would move our sluggish population to go to work in least no one seems to know how many he has; good earnest. We need at once 20,000 laborers and he has himself confessed to forgetfulness in employed in the turpentine region of the State. We need as many at work in our iron, copper teen to twenty genuine or complete wives, and and gold mines, besides every man that can be about as many more women "scaled" to him for gotten to cultivate our fields of cotton, tobacco, heavenly association and glory. The latter are wheat and corn. Moreover we need well skilled mostly pious old ladies, eager for high seats in artizans to work in factories and work-shops to the Mormon heaven, and knowing no surer way produce every tool, every piece of furniture, to get there than to be tacked on to Brigham's every piece of machinery or mechanism needed

"We learn that in this County, and perhaps in this town, and in other places in the State, there are secret meetings of colored people held, where matters are discussed, which may lead to most serious consequences." . The rumor is rather too intangible to be fully relied upon, but the circumstances and surroundings of our people, very justly excite suspicions, and it would not be amiss to enquire a little more particularly into the matter. It does seem to us that no strictly secret meeting should be allowed at all, and everywhere should be charged wish this matter, and should be instructed to prevent anything of the kind."
