A CHILD'S WISH.

On her grave-stone these words were carved, "Lifted Higher."

When the sunlight fell with radiant glory Over her little bed.

And the wind with gentle fingers, moved The tresses on her head. With fainter voice she whispered, while

The angel wings drew nigher. And loving ones had hushed their sobs-"Oh, Father, lift me higher."

But her dim sight looked yet further Than our weeping eyes could see, Far beyond the land of sunsets, Into Immortality.

She heeded not the crimson mist That crowned the hills with fire, But only breathed, in gentle tones, "Dear Father, lift me higher."

Yet while she spoke the color died From out the evening sky, And twilight, clad in ashy robes, Passed slow and silent by ; And Death had shut the door of Life,

Smitten the golden lyre, And answered the sweet childish wish. But to be "lifted higher."

Father, we thank Thee! for the child Treads now the eternal hills-Her footsteps falter not beside The ever-flowing rills.

Lifted above all grief and care, From trials borne away, She has exchanged the twilight gloom For never ending day.

New York, having occasion to purchase some jewelry, entered an omnibus and came down Broadway to visit a store where such articles were sold. On the way she noticed a gentleman in a fine broadcloth suit sitting beside her. and especially noticed a brilliant diamond ring on his finger. She selected her articles and had the bill made out, and was about to pay it, when she discovered that her purse was missing, and told the jeweler she must decline taking the articles as she had been robbed on her way down. He enquired particularly about the company in the omnibus, and she told him about the man with the diamond ring. She at his direction examined her pocket again, and turned it inside out, when lo! here was that ring. The robber when slipping out her purse had slipped it from his finger, and left it behind. The jeweler offered her $500 for it and run all risks.
