

For the Western Democrat. The following Epitaph was copied from the R. I. Advocate, in 1836. Perhaps some of your readers can furnish a solution:

I am a compound of six parts, Am used to almost all the arts, O'er all the globe I oft have been, Yet ne'er by mortal eye was seen, The first and second of my parts Are sometimes found with farmer's carts: Is most afraid his lass will show: My sixth and first put with my last, Joined with my fifth, is all that's past. My first and sixth united, make Brave Perry's watchword on the Lake: My sixth and fifth put with my third, Would be a name by France revered. My first and third, was killed by Jews, When he to cheat disguised his shoes: When time began my whole was formed, I into life have millions warmed. No heat in me was ever found, Nor light, nor smell, nor any sound, Yet I can burn the hardest steel, And make galvanic batteries yield. I often deal in human blood, Yet all mankind pronounce me good. I furnish man with meat and drink; Am in life's chain the strongest link; My name is known o'er all the land— From Greenland's seas to India's strand. While time endures on earth I dwell, But what I am no man can tell.
