THE WESTERN DEMOCRAT, CHARLOTTE, IN. C.I.

SONG OF THE SOUTHERN MAID.

My lover was a soldier boy, As true as he was brave; And when his country wanted it, His life to her he gave.

When first he heard the tocsin note, He boldly joined the van; And though in years he was a boy, In deeds he was a man.

When he had donned his army grey, And grasped his musket tight, His bounding step was on the march, His heart was in the fight.

Wherever duty beckoned him, He saw no danger there; Or saw with the scorn of one Who would all danger dare.

No full-starred General was he, But he was truly more, For on his breast the honored scars Of many a fight he bore.

Nor were his laurels less because He filled an humble post; Nor less the cause for which he died, Because the cause was lost.

And though no monument is raised Above his lowly bed, That grassy mound shall link his name With our illustrious dead.

And lost to country and to me, Who for us both would live, May Heaven grant to him the boon Which earth refused to give. Alexandria, Va , Dec. 26, 1866. MARY.
