[FOR THE WESTERN DEMOCRAT.] Cryolite.

This is a remarkable mineral discovered Greenland not many years ago, and which takes its name from its resemblance to ice, and it can, like ice, be melted in the flame of a candle.

1. It is not said to be found any where else in the world, but there is there an immense vein of it, from which it is said that 160,000 tons can be obtained. In fact, as it is believed to be a volcanic product, and the vein goes down to the center of the earth, the supply is inexhaustible though the expense of working beyond a certain depth would be too great. The mine is owned. depth would be too great. The mine is owned, and the mineral is quarried out by a firm in Philadelphia.

We saw a notice, a short time ago, of a ship lost at sea with a cargo of this on board, and also having the crew of another vessel that had been previously lost on the way to Philadelphia.

2. It is known in Chemistry as the flueride of Sodium and Aluminum, and from it different products are obtained by different processes. For instance, great quantities of caustic Soda The mineral is said to contain 44 per cent of hydrated Soda, the manufacture of which from this mineral is much more rapid and profitable than from common salt as formerly. Alumina is an incidental product in this manufacture.

3. A new metal was discovered a few years ago, called Aluminum. This is easily derived from this mineral. It is singular in several respects. It is a white metal with a bluish tinge. It resists oxidation, or rusting. It has a low specific gravity. While iron is about 8 times as heavy as the same volume of water, tin a little less, copper a little more, silver more than 10, and lead more than 11, gold more than 19, and platinum more than 21 times as heavy as water, this metal. Aluminum is only 2 and six-tenths, in specific gravity.

4. But by another process another metal, Sodium, can be made from this mineral, which is lighter even than water and floats on it. It is vellowish white and soft like wax.

This metal has been very costly, but it is said that, though it was once sold by the grain, works are erected in New York to manufacture tons of it, so that it can be sold for $4 a pound, and as its specific gravity is so low, a pound will be a large bulk.

5. This mineral from Greenland is interesting from the number of ores that are found with it -iron-stone, lead ore, copperas, sulphur, arsenic, tin-stone, tantalite, columbite, zinc, blende, &c. If any one has any curiosity to see a specimen of this rare mineral, one furnished by the Smithsonian Institution will be left for a time at the E. F. R. Democrat Office. Davidson College, N. C.

Wearing Mourning.

It is not the custom of our people to symbolize their feelings by a change of dress, with this solitary exception. If a man becomes bankrupt, or his home burned down, or loses heavily in commercial operations, or has a son in disgrace, or a child misled by evil company, or any other griefful experience, he does not change his garb. The one solitary and exceptional case is bereavement! But there is in domestic sorrow a delicacy, or ought to be, which should shrink from an ostentatiousness such as mourn-upon every eye wherever he goes.

Custom has long justified it, otherwise it would be esteemed an indelicacy for one to be a walking advertisement of one's own private griefs. But, even if one were permitted to announce this one side of domestic experience by change of garb, the question still remains, whether expression should be given to the weak ness of natural feeling, or the triumph of Christian faith? Whether we should symbolize the darkness of the grave as unenlightened nature shows it, or the grave made luminous by the triumph of our Saviour and the glories of immortality beyond it? We may be sure there is something wrong in a Christian community where death is surrounded with associations of terror, where the young are reared to a horror of the sepulchre, where present grief rises up like a dark cloud and shuts out the heaven; wherein sermon, services, conversation and dresseverything conspires to shroud death and the grave with darkness-has sorrow a right to be selfish? May it bear false witness against immorality? Has a Christian under bereavement a right to declare by his conduct, "There is no light in the grave, none beyond it, and no comfort for the bereaved but only black, black sorrow!" I never met one muffled in black from head to foot, without a certain horror. The smell of crape is to me like the smell of a charnel house!

Did it ever occur to mourners to ask, what, if those for whom I grieve were to speak to me out of the blissful rest in heaven, would be their choice-that I should be shrouded like one in despair, or robed as one who mourns, but with Christian hope?-H. Ward Beecher.

During his conveyance from the Marguerite Isles, De Saint Mars dined at the same table and slept in the same chamber with him, with pistols ever at hand ready to destroy him in case of an attempt on his part to reveal himself. In the Bastle he was waited upon, at the table and toilet by the governor, who took charge when he went to hear mass, the invalides, who were in charge of him, with muskets and lighted in case of his speaking or showing his face. this mysterious person was who was treated with and demands correction. SHAMEFUL AFFAIR.—A correspondent the Portland (Me.,) Argus, writing from Sweden, in that State, tells the following disgraceful

A man living in this town has just committed an act that deserves the censure of the public, as it has already received that of his neighbors. He has formally contracted with his brother to take out of his way his aged and invalid wife, and support, clothe and bury her for $1,000. She has been a hard working and faithful wife, and has raised a large family of children, who have never felt what it was to be disgraced till now. One of them, a man of twenty years and the shrewd, sharp kind of men, he wrote the affair. He had offered to support her himself if upward, cried like a child when he heard of the the old man would give him the farm to do it with, which was refused. And now this man sends his wife from home, where "she has outlived her usefulness," to die among strangers! He has not even the excuse of poverty to plead, for he is accounted the richest man in town.

No Good DEED LOST .- Philosophers tell us that since the creation of the world, not one single particle has ever been lost. It may have passed into new shapes-it may have floated away in smoke or vapor-but it is not lost. It will come back again in the dewdrop or the rain —it will spring up in the fibre of the plant itself, or the rose leaf. Through all its formation, Providence watches over and directs it still .-Even so it is with every holy thought or heavenly element of the moral world, and it is not lost.

The following "counsels" were given by the late Rev. Dr. Peabody, of Springfield, to his son, when the latter was going from home to reside, with the request that he would read them daily : 1. Never forget that you have a Heavenly Father. Speak to him every day. It is ungrateful to neglect him; and if you do neglect him, you will repent it bitterly forever.

2. Remember your friends at home, and how anxious they are for your welfare and improvement. If you will not take the trouble to write to them, they can have no confidence in your

3. Be affectionate and faithful to the friends around you. Give up your own inclinations when they interfere with theirs.

4. Govern your passions firmly. You can be their master; do not be their slave. 5. Always attend to duties first, and afterwards to pleasures. Finish your studies before you allow your amusements to begin. 6. Do not read much fiction. It is to the mind like drinking to the body; it intoxicates and destroys the power of the mind for any strong and useful exertion.

7. Ask of every thing which you are disposed or tempted to do, Is this right? If it is, do it however much it costs you; if it is not, let nothing induce you to do it. Every time you obey your conscience, you increase its power within you. Each time you act against it, you do some thing to destroy its power.

8. Never forget that you are on the way to world where you must answer for every thing that you have done. Live so that you may give in your account with joy, and not with dread.

Does it Pay to Advertise?-A gentleman doing business in Boston, while traveling in the cars a year or two since, took a copy of the London Punch with which to relieve the monotony of a tedious journey; and having finished read fancy," took to reading the advertisements. At last, in a remote corner, he discovered an announcement, about half an inch in length, which told him where an article he dealt largely in could be procured in England; and being one of hundred pounds sterling, and during the year his partner, visiting Europe, left another large order, and they still remain good customers. All this was the result of the half inch advertisement. Who will say that it does not pay to advertise?

THE EARTHQUAKE AT KINGSTON .- A letter from Kingston, Jamaica, dated the 15th ultimo,

Two frightful shocks of earthquake were experienced here a little before and about midnight on the 12th instant. The shocks, which were preceded by a severe thunder storm, commenced about a point southwest, and passed over the city to the north. The second shock produced a great panic, and we are to offer up a thanksgiving in the churches for our escape from very fatal damage."

How to Discover the Newly Married. A more than usual number of wedding tourist are noticed by travellers and conductors on the different railroads.

Of course, it is not on account of being ashamed of each other that they try to disguise their situation, but simply to avoid being criticised and remarked upon by profane strangers.

Thus they lay the fond unction to their souls that they are traveling in eeg. But, good gra-cious, how badly fooled they are. It is one of the easiest things in the world to the careful eye to tell precisely how many days, or even hours they have been "spliced." They can sometimes be detected by the great pains they take to ap-pear either like old married people or cousins, as they promenade the deck of a steamer, or sit so demurely in the cars. In many cases their dress, in part, exposes them. It is so appropos to the occasion being neat, symmetrical and bran new. In cases where the parties have good taste, there is no guadiness about their attire. Al glitter and display are thrown aside, and the city belle appears like more a Quakeress in her simple travelling dress of drab or mouse color.

Sometimes the youthful culprits engage in playing at lovers or effect a flirtation, but it is always a stupendous failure. Their eyes betray too much happiness for wit and repartee; there is such a peculiar softness and tenderness in their confidential whispers, and such a pride in the possession of each other, that none of them are deceived. It is generally that the bride-groom makes the discovery first, and throws his arm cerelessly around the shoulders of his wife, as much as to say, defiantly to the envious, "Who's afraid? Who knows but that we have been married many years?" Not know? The guilty slyness in the way that arm steals around, first on the top of the seat back and then gradually closer, while the bride evinces silent pleasure as she acquiesces in a very unperceiving way. Indeed, it is she who "lets the cat out of on the seat back of them you will observe at first While enroute to that place in a private convey- that the lady's shoulders are not even-they in-Oulds would make their chief a splendid squaw. gravitates to the broad shoulders of her husband in the repose of honest, pare and truthful love. What the Rills Said.

I have been watching the little rills jumping and skipping merrily along, and it made me think of the talk a good doctor once had with some of them as he was traveling over the Allegany Mountains. "What was it ?" Well, he asked them where they were going

"Oh," they said, "just down the mountain." "And what are you going to do as you go down the mountain?" he asked. "O, we shall make friends with other little rills, and grow bigger," said they. "And what will you do when you grow big-"O, we shall turn saw-mills and grist-mills; and when we get down through all the rocks on the plains, we shall set some great iron factories and cotton-mills in motion.' "And what will you do then?" "Then? Why, we shall make the Alleghany and Monongahela rivers, and when we are big enough we shall make the great Ohio." "And what then ?" "What then? Why, we shall unite our fores-for we do not mean to live by ourselveswith the great Missouri and Mississippi, and help them carry a thousand ships to the ocean." "What! are you going to do this, you little

"Yes sir, we are; and if you don't believe us, we can't stop to convince you of it, for we are in a hurry," and off they ran on a jump.

If the little rills are going to do so much, what will not the children do, the boys and girls who are growing bigger and stronger every day, and will by and by be felt for good or evil in this world. Some who are bright and sparkling now, will, I am afraid, run into the first snug and sunny spot, and there stop until they dry up. An easy, selfish life, blessing nobody, at last shrinks to nothing. Others who are promising now, will I am afraid, by and by be diverted from the right way, and turn off into dark chaning its well stocked columns of "fact, fun and nels, where they will be lost; and others, a great number of our dear boys and girls, I pray God, may grow up strong and good, to unite their forces with all good and noble works, to bless the places where they live, and make the nation better for their having lived in it.

Hogs .- During the past week we have noticed a large increase in the number of hogs being driven Southward for market. They are generally of good size and in very fine condition. It is strong evidence of the prosperity of our neigh-bors of East Tennessee that they can contribute so largely to the less fortunate South. When cotton, however, is selling at nearly nothing a pound, we don't see how our South-Carolina friends can manage to raise the equivalent in greenbacks for these fine porkers. One of the secrets of the easy independence of the great. West lies in the fact that it always raises its own "hog and hominy," and our Southern States, would, it seems to us, do well to try and follow the example .- Ashville Pioneer.

We think all our people would do well to raise more "hog and hominy." and devote less attention to tobacco and cotton.

One of the novelties of Parisian enter-DESTRUCTIVE FIRE.—We regret to state that prise is a large warehouse, in which are sold, at the elegant dwelling of our esteemed friend, Mr retail, all manner of goods, from a diamond neck-
