Oh, ye pretty twinkling stars, Shining through your golden bars, Tell me, from your glorious height, What it was ye saw last night?

Underneath my lattice near Came low love-tones, soft and clear, Mingled with the light guitar's-Did ye hear them, gentle stars?

Softly up my window came; If ye saw me do not blame, For 'twas he, my love, stood under; If I spoke to him what wonder?

If I leaned and fondly gazed In those eyes to mine upraised, Tell me, ere you rashly blame, Would not augels do the same?

Only one sweet word of love, Just my faithfulness to prove Only one fond wafted kiss, Just to tell him I was his;

Then my window closed again

And my love went down the lane-Tell me, through your golden bars, Did ye see him, oh ye stars?

TO BE READ AT SEVEN P. M .- The dangerousness of evening to youth in cities, is thus expressively stated by George Hillard :

"To a young man from home, friendless and forlorn, in a great city, the hours of peril are those between sunset and bedtime; for the moon Has just received a large addition to their Stock of and stars see more evil in a single hour than the New Books, Stationery and Fancy Articles. The sun in his whole day's circuit. The poet's visions of evening are all composed of tender and soothing images. It brings the wanderer to his home, the child to its mother's arms, the ox to his stall, and the weary laborer to his rest. But to the gentle-hearted youth, who is thrown upon the rocks of a pitiless city, and stands homeless amid a thousand homes, the approach of evening brings with it an aching sense of loneliness and desolation, which comes down on the spirit like darkness upon the earth. In this mood, his Mitchell's and Cornell's Geographies; Copy Books; best impulses become a snare to him, and he is Quackenbo's and Brookfield's Composition; all classes led astray because he is social, affectionate, sympathetic, and warm hearted. If there be a young man thus circumstanced within the sound of my voice, let me say to him, that books are Dictionary the friends of the friendless, and that a library NEW PRESBYTERIAN HYMN BOOK, is 'the home of the homeless."
