"No, you Don't!"

It is known that, during the first two years of the war, many a poor fellow lost an arm or leg at the hands of the surgeons which could have been saved with a little care. The medical department were "practicing," with a vengeance, and it was useless for the mangled victims of the battle-field to protest.

The night succeeding the last awful day of Shiloh, a boy from Memphis, a private in a Tennessee regiment of cavalry, was brought into the operating-room of one of the hospitals, and stretched upon the table for examination. A bullet had gone through his thigh, and the surgeon, after a hasty glance at the wound, called for his instruments, at the same time directing several attendants to assist at the amputation of the limb. But he had reckoned without his host. The injured man began to plead for his leg, begging to be permitted to die even in preference to losing it.

The doctor paid no attention to his protests. but ordered his assistants to do their duty. They sprang forward, and at the same time the patient drew from his bosom a six-shooter, saying: "Now, doctor, I've been respectful and humble with you, and it don't do any good. Listen to me: the first man that lays a hand upon me to take that leg off, will get his brains blown out!" The surgeon stepped forward, knife in hand; an assistant seized the left hand, and received the weight of his pistol on his temple, measuring his length upon the floor. Esculapius heard the "click" of the hammer, and found the muzzle within an inch of his ear, while in calm, determined tones came the words:

"No you don't !" "Carry him out !" growled the doctor; "let him die, and be d-d to him !"

I saw him last he told me the story, and slapping the Golden Syrup and Maiden's Choice. A small, his thigh, remarked:

"That's just as good a leg as any man's leg, and worth a cord of cork legs."

Always Love. Because Love's sign is but a sign,

Doth it less Love's heart disclose? Because the rose must fade and die, Is it the less a lovely rose? Because the night must shroud the day, Shall the brave sun no more be gay?

Because chill autumn frights the birds, Shall we distrust that spring will come? Because sweet words are only words, Shall Love forever more be dumb? Because our bliss is fleeting bliss, Shall we who love forbear the kiss?

Because those eyes of gentle mirth Must sometimes cause my heart to thrill; Because the sweetest voice on earth Sooner or later must be still; Because its idol is unsure, Shall my strong love the less endure?

Ah, no let lovers breathe their sighs; And roses bloom and music sound, And passion burn on lips and eyes, And pleasure's merry world go round; Let golden sunshine flood the sky, And let me love or let me die!
