Preservation of Leather.

A contributor to the Shoe and Leather Reporter gives some valuable hints in relation to the preservation of Leather. The extreme heat to which most men and women expose boots and shoes during the winter deprives leather of vitality, rendering it liable to break and crack. Patent leather particularly, is often destroyed in this manner. When leather becomes so warm as to give off the smell of leather, it is singed. Next to the singeing caused by fire heat, is the heat and dampness caused by the covering of rubber. Close rubber shoes destroy the life of

The practice of washing harness in warm water is very damaging. If a coat of oil is put on immediately after washing, the damage is repaired. No harness is ever so soiled that a damp sponge will not remove the dirt; but even when the sponge is applied, it is always useful to add a slight coat of oil by the use of another

All varnishes, and all blacking containing the properties of varnish, should be avoided. Ignorant and indolent hostlers are apt to use such substances on their harness as will give the most immediate effect, and these, as a general thing, are most destructive to the leather.

When harness loses its lustre and turns brown, which almost any leather will do after long exposure to the air, the barness should be given a new coat of grain black. Before using this grain black, the grain surface should be thoroughly washed with potash water until the grease is killed, and after the application of the grain black, turpentine, and no harm will result if the parts affected are washed and oiled immediately after.

Shoe leather is generally abused. Persons know nothing or less about the kind of material used than they do about the polish produced. Vitriol blacking is used until every particle of the oil in the leather is destroyed. To remedy this abuse the leather should be washed once a dry, a coat of oil and tallow should be applied, and the boots set aside for a day or two. This will renew the elasticity and tite in the leather, and when thus used, upper leather will seldom

Band leather is not generally properly used. When oil is applied to beiting dry, it does not incorporate itself with the fibre, as when partly dampened with water. The best way to oil a belt is to take it from the pullies and immerse it in a warm solution of tallow and oil. After allowing it to remain a few moments, the belt should be immersed in water heated to one hundred degrees, sifted out. Call and try them. and instantly removed. This will drive the oil and tallow all in, and at the same time properly temper the leather.
