

Horae Talk

BOTS IN HORSES.—It is a prevalent impression that bots often cause the death of horses. This conclusion is discredited by Dr. Stewart, in the "American Farmers' Horse Book." His opinion is that the true character of the bot and its influence on the health of the horse have been misunderstood very generally; that the bot is hereditary with the horse, and found attached by the tail to the coating of the stomach of the colt in the shape of a small parasite. In this normal condition the bot causes no injury to the horse, has no relationship to the grub worm, the last being the offspring of the gad fly, which deposits its eggs upon the hair of the horse and are bitten off and swallowed by the animal. These develop into worms in time, pass off with the excrement, burrow in the ground, where a chrysalis is formed, and in due season the gad flies are the result. This grub, unlike the bot, never attacks itself to the coating of the stomach, but amid the food the same as worms in the stomach of a child. These worms may cause much uneasiness to the horse but never death.

As to the bot and his operations, Dr. Stewart adds:—"The cuticular coating of the stomach to which the bot fastens himself by means of two little bearded hooks, is nearly, if not wholly, insensible, having no more feeling apparently than the animal's hoofs. When the horse is in health it is hard, rigid, impenetrable, and the bot, if ever so much disposed to do so, would attack it in vain; but when death seizes him this coating becomes relaxed and soft, and begins rapidly to decompose. Then only is it that the bot can or ever does work his way through it. Another fact still more strongly corroborative of the above proposition, is this: that of any number of horses killed while in perfect health, and opened an hour or two afterward, there will be found no one whose stomach is not riddled by the bot. Dissection has revealed the existence of this condition in hundreds of instances of sudden death from accident.

This riddling of the stomach is a consequence, not the cause, of the death of the horse, according to the theory here presented. When the animal dies from the effects of disease or from accidental causes, the insect of the bot teaches it that decomposition of its home, the stomach of the horse, must readily take place, involving its own death, hence its prompt efforts to escape from its festering prison. It is the same instinct which induces rats to attempt escape from a scuttled ship or from a building threatened with destruction by fire or submersion by water. If this is a true solution of the bot question, the care of the horse will be considerably simplified and ailing animals relieved from many disagreeable drenchings designed to expel from their stomachs what has been generally regarded as a mortal enemy. Those well posted in regard to the horse, his enemies and diseases, will doubtless give the theory of Dr. Stewart, in reference to the bot, proper consideration.

CURE FOR FOUNDER.—The Rural World proposes to cure founder in horses in this way: Take the horse into a brook or stream of water, deep enough to nearly reach his body, and fasten him there with his head so high that he cannot drink. If the weather is warm keep him there several hours. Then remove him and rub his legs thoroughly to promote circulation. If still lame repeat the process two or three times and a cure will be effected. In the winter twenty minutes will be long enough to keep the horse in the water, when he should be taken out and rubbed as in the other case—repeating the operation if necessary. This is said to cure all cases of founder, when not of long standing.

The Physician.

An ancient writer on the Physician, the use of means and prayer, says:

"Honor the Physician with that honor that is due unto him, because of necessity; for the Lord hath created him. For of the Most High cometh healing, and he shall receive gifts of the King. The knowledge of the Physician lieth up his head, and in the sight of great men he shall be in admiration. The Lord hath created medicines of the earth, and he that is wise will not abhor them. * * * With such doth he heal men, and taketh away their pains. Of such doth the Apothecary make a confection, and yet he cannot finish his own works; for of the Lord cometh his prosperity and wealth over all the earth. My son fail not in the sickness, but pray unto the Lord and he will make thee whole. * * * Then give place to the Physician; for the Lord hath created him; let him not go from thee for thou hast need of him. The hour may come that their enterprises may have good success. For they shall pray unto the Lord, that he prosper that which is given for ease, and their physic for the prolonging of life."—Ecc. 38: 1-14.
